George Hints Friend Lost U. S. Post for Backing Him

But NEC Chief Asserts State Director Quit to Be Banker.

Texans Will Vote In Primary Today

Seats of Sumners and Maverick in House Are at Stake.

By William V. Nessly.

A charge by Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia that the State director of the National Emergency Council has been removed, "probably" for supporting George highlighted yesterday's political thunder, which included Republican assertions that relief administration is being directed toward obtaining a third term for President Roosevelt.

In addition:

Former President Hoover announced he would make the first of several campaign addresses this fall at Kansas City in September.

John Hamilton, Republican national chairman, in addition to making the charge of political relief administration, jumped into the G. O. P. senatorial primary fight in Kansas by calling for defeat of the Rev. Gerald Winrod (Republican), whom he accused of intolerance.

Chief Justice Richard B. Russell, sr., of Georgia, father of Senator Russell, publicly urged President Roosevelt to denounce Senator George, his son's official colleague.

The stiff campaign fights of Representatives Hatton Sumners, who helped kill the President's court plan, and Maury Maverick were being watched with interest here as Texas prepared for her primary election today.

George Omits Name.

Senator George made his charge of apparent Administration intervention in his primary fight, in reply to a questionnaire sent to all Senate candidates by the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee. He did not name the official to the committee but told it:

"One Federal officer has been removed in Georgia probably for the sole reason that he proposes to vote for me and a Washington official sent down to take charge of his office. I merely cite this one case."

In a statement at Atlanta, Ga., however, George said his protest was against the discharge of Erle Cocke as State director of the National Emergency Council, and his replacement by Dr. C. H. Foreman, special assistant to Public

Canada Padlocks Home; Red Jailed In Trying to Enter

Quebec, July 22 (Canadian Press). F. X. Lessard was arrested tonight for allegedly trying to force his way into his residence, padlocked by provincial authorities yesterday because of his reported communistic activities. He was taken into custody in front of his residence.

Mrs. Lessard and two of her children were evicted yesterday. Lessard was reported "away at work" at the time.

It was the first application here of the padlock laws aimed to prevent spread of communism.

GOVERNMENT BY FRANCO

A Description and Forecast by Father Jos. F. Thorning

Dr. Thorning, a member of the faculty at Mt. St. Mary's College, is one of the ablest and most vigorous American supporters of the Franco regime in Spain. On the conclusion of his second lengthy visit to Nationalist Spain, he has written for The Post two articles describing the government of Spain under Franco, as it is now in the parts under nationalist rule, and as it is planned for the future. Sympathizers with either side in the Spanish civil war will find these authoritative articles of great interest. Look for them on page opposite editorial.

Hill-Billy Band Steals Spotlight

Texan Uses Music to Win Votes; Kentucky's Chandler Ill.

The day's news spectacle, tragic, mirthful, academic, revolved about many striking figures, well or little known, among whom these might be said to stand out:

W. L. O'Daniel.

W. Lee O'Daniel, flour maker and composer of ballads, who has completely upset orthodox campaigning methods in the hectic Texas primary—the voting is today—by appealing to the State's million voters with a hill-billy band and a platform consisting of the Ten Commandments. Texans are soberly wondering whether he has really captured the gubernatorial nomination.

Gov. Chandler.

Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler, stricken suddenly ill in the midst of his campaign for the Senate, seeking to unseat Alben Barkley, majority leader. The Governor was reported yesterday to have a fever of 105 degrees.

Theodore Bilbo.

Senator Theodore (The Man) Bilbo, of Mississippi, won a final divorce decree yesterday after a settlement in which he is to pay Mrs. Bilbo $20,750. "Broke, broke," he said after the hearing. He had charged cruelty. Mrs. Bilbo said she hoped he enjoyed "his freedom, as he calls it."

Willard Thorp Picked to Help Trust Inquiry

'Brain-Truster,' Center of 1934 Dispute, Already Busy at Duties.

Dr. Willard L. Thorp, one of the country's best known economic research specialists, and, in 1934, center of a long and bitter dispute between President Roosevelt and the Senate Commerce Committee, will direct the Commerce Department's inquiries in the current monopoly investigation, it was learned yesterday.

Dr. Thorp, chosen for the task by Assistant Secretary of Commerce Patterson, under whom he will work, has already taken up his duties. Since 1935, when he resigned as economic adviser to the NRA Advisory Council, he has been director of economic research for Dun & Bradstreet.

Dr. Thorp, known as one of President Roosevelt's "brain trust" in 1934, was given a recess appointment as director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce in the Commerce Department. He served in that capacity for nine months before a fight on confirma-

Murray Calls Girdler Firm A 'Cesspool'

And Republic's Lawyer Promises Reply 'Just as Strong.'

Steel Union Head Argues on Blocking of Mail at Hearing Here.

By Sidney Olson.

In even, measured tones, Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, yesterday attacked the labor policies of the Republic Steel Corporation as constituting the "filthiest industrial cesspool in America."

Thus, Round Two of the battle between two of the country's most outspoken men went temporarily to Murray—temporarily in that Republic's lawyer, Thomas F. Patton, pledged before the Senate Civil Liberties Committee that Republic's president, Tom M. Girdler, will answer Murray "in just as strong and just as picturesque language."

Only the strong Scotch burr of the tall, gray-fringed right-hand man to John L. Lewis betrayed the depth of his emotion as he charged:

"I know of no single corporation in the United States that has resorted to the use of more reprehensible tactics against labor than has Republic."

Cites Mail Incident.

Patton, aroused by the Murray tongue-lashing, took the stand to make charges of his own concerning C. I. O. tactics in Republic strikes last year, saying quietly:

"For the first time in the industrial history of this country, pickets of a labor union had undertaken to tell the United States Government through its Postoffice Department when and where and to whom it might deliver mail.

"This sacred branch of the Government, never before tampered with, was for the first time assailed. A surge of resentment swept over the country and soon culminated in the investigation by the Senate Postoffice Committee. Nine C. I. O. members were arrested . . . indicted and upon trial pleaded guilty and were subjected to the penalties of the law.

"One of those men, so convicted, was Joe Morton, the head of the C. I. O. lodge at Massillon, Ohio, one of the thoroughly reliable and dependable organizers to whom Mr. Murray referred."

Murray Quotes Farley.

Murray thereupon resumed the stand to recall that Postmaster General James A. Farley had warned Republic not to use the mails to break strikes and said that "unlawful methods used" were not by C. I. O. pickets. He said Morton was not an organizer but a Republic employe elected to leadership.

Earlier Murray had testified that the C. I. O. had "not had a single strike in the 18 months" during which it has had contracts with the steel companies. He said that 80 per cent of all of the steel industry's manufacturing and fabricating plants were now organized in C. I. O. unions. Murray reported:

"We now have agreements with 535 steel companies in the industry. In most instances, a great majority, in fact, the managements of those corporations have personally told me of their satisfaction with the contracts, with their labor relations in general, and have expressed a desire to renew the contracts at their expiration."

$1,500,000 on Organization.

Murray revealed that the C. I. O. had turned over $500,000 to the S. W. O. C. and that a total of $1,500,000 had been spent thus far to organize about 565,000 steel workers in the union.

Patton, in his statement, referred to the Morgan case, decided by the Supreme Court at its last sitting, "which held that even a governmental agency of the United States could not deprive one of its citizens of the due process of law." He continued:

"Promptly thereafter, however,

Papa's Pride Is Justified— Baby Roosevelt's a Winner

Philadelphia, July 22 (AP).—A traffic violation, a minor matter between two proud fathers, went disregarded today—and City Policeman Elmer Steward got to see President Roosevelt's 3-day-old grandson.

Steward halted an automobile driven by Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., for a minor traffic infraction and, when the driver introduced himself, asked:

"How about seeing the baby, papa?"

"Why not?" Roosevelt replied, grinning, and took Steward to the Pennsylvania Hospital.

"A fine lad, Mr. Roosevelt," beamed Steward, himself a father.

P. S.—Steward said he did not give Roosevelt a ticket.

Philadelphia, July 22 (U.P.).—Two unidentified small girls today became the first persons outside of the Roosevelt and du Pont families to present a gift to the baby son of Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., and the former Ethel du Pont. The girls, apparently unable to locate the baby's hospital room, thrust a cheap rattle into the hands of a nurse, said, "Here, give this to Baby Roosevelt," and fled.

Traffic Kills 3d D.C. Child In Three Days

Boy, 12 Dies When Auto Rams Truck; Driver Is Held.

David Marshall Mockabee, 12, of 616 L street southeast, was crushed to death between an automobile and a truck almost in front of his home yesterday, the third child to die in District traffic in three days.

Robert Williams.

Thursday, Robert Williams, 9, of 4602 Forty-third street northwest, was killed near his home, and Joseph Lee Davis, 3, of 122 F street southeast, was killed Wednesday in front of his home.

Young Mockabee's death brought the total for four days to four, a colored man having been killed in addition to the children. Traffic deaths for the year were raised to 49, as compared with 60 at this date last year.

Joseph Davis.

Alarmed by the epidemic of casualties among District children, Inspector William Holmes in charge of traffic last night issued special orders to all policemen for their protection. Members of the force were told to halt children riding double on bicycles or riding scooters or wagons in the street.

4 Are Named To Investigate D. C. Bonding

Criminal Justice Group's Report Credited for Adkins' Order.

Alleged abuses by bondsmen in criminal courts of the District will be investigated by a committee of four appointed yesterday by Justice Jesse C. Adkins of United States District Court.

Investigators are Harry Underwood, Assistant United States Attorney; Col. Charles E. Stewart, chief clerk of District Court; William Adkins, criminal clerk of District Court, and Walter F. Bramhall, chief clerk of Police Court.

A report of the Washington Criminal Justice Association criticizing activities of criminal court bondsmen was credited with inspiring Justice Adkins' order for an investigation. The report charged "existing evils" resulted from "inadequate regulation, lack of co-operation and co-ordination and general apathy on the part of public officials and society as a whole."

Il Duce's Cadets, Mobbed in Dublin, Confined to Ships

Dublin, July 22 (U.P.).—Shore leave of visiting Italian cadets from the naval training ships Vespucci and Columbo was canceled tonight after anti-Fascist demonstrators attacked them as they marched through Dublin streets. The demonstrators, shouted "Remember Abyssinia!" and "Down with Mussolini!"

The cadets fell into mass formation and charged the demonstrators. Other citizens sided with the cadets and succeeded in pushing back the demonstrators and making a path for the cadets to return to their training ships.

San Francisco, July 22 (U.P.).Forest fires tonight threatened three British Columbia towns and forced evacuation of lumber and vacation camps in scattered sections.

Flames which already had blackened 150,000 acres of forest land spread despite the desperate efforts of thousands of fire fighters in California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho and British Columbia.

U.S. Combing City in Crisis For Offices

Large Private Buildings All Taken, Smaller Ones Going.

Rising Tide of Clerks Even Forces Resort to Garages.

By Robert C. Albright.

Pressure for space by Washington's new Federal agencies and expanding old ones yesterday found the Government faced with a new housing problem—the problem of finding offices for its local family of 114,544 employes.

Large-scale commercial space in Washington's larger private buildings virtually was exhausted two years ago, and Government "space-control" officials are now combing the city for accommodations that can be made over into quarters for new agencies.

Privately owned office space rented by the Government here has reached a new peak—3,245,775 square feet, against 3,215,000 square feet last year and 2,943,000 square feet in 1936. The rental bill has climbed accordingly to $3,000,000 for this year, compared with $2,800,000 last year and $2,694,792 the year previous.

New Units Clamor.

In 1933 the Government paid a rental bill of only $826,000 for 1,191,735 square feet of private office space in Washington.

A multiplicity of new agencies created by the last Congress and expanded activities and larger staffs voted most of the old ones accounts for the present office hunt. Some, like the new National Aeronautics Board, already are clamoring for quarters and others, like the new wage-hour office in the Labor Department, soon will be.

Size of Federal pay rolls and the army of local Government workers are stepping up rapidly, but they are not yet reflected in official personnel figures, which are two months behind. The last figures were for May, before the present rush of expansion. They showed the Government had a pay roll of $124,951,733 in that month for a staff of 840,742 workers, not including military, legislative and official personnel. Of that number, 114,544 were housed in Washington. When July figures are published, they undoubtedly will show an apparent increase of several thousand.

Agencies Wait in Line.

New buildings being completed by the Government, notably the Apex Building and the new Bureau of Engraving structure, have failed to solve the space problem, as vacated quarters immediately were taken over by agencies that had been waiting in line.

When the Federal Trade Commission moved out of the Rochambeau Building into the Apex structure, the Social Security staff, which has offices spread out all over town and in Baltimore, promptly occupied the Rochambeau.

As Bureau of Engraving and Printing office employes (now moving), leave old quarters at 119 D street northeast (57,000 square feet), an overflow from the General Accounting Office will move right in.

But somehow, as the growth continues, the Government always manages to wangle a little more room for its growing family. With

Gov. Earle Orders Special Session to Halt Court Inquiry

Harrisburg, Pa., July 22 (AP).—George H. Earle, Governor and Democratic nominee for United States Senator, fighting what he called "usurpation" of legislative powers by the courts, late today ordered a special session of Pennsylvania's Legislature, primarily to conduct an "open" investigation of campaign charges against the chief executive and 13 associates. A grand jury investigation is already scheduled.

"The constitutional rights of the legislative and executive branches of the government are in danger of being invaded," the Democratic Governor declared in proclaiming the extraordinary meeting. Democrats control both the Senate and the House. They are to convene Monday night.

Two weeks from that day the Dauphin County (Harrisburg) grand jury is to begin consideration of the accusations that Earle and 13 others high in the State government and the Democratic Party "conspired" to "blackmail" firms doing business with the State, "extort" money for political purposes and coerce State employes for votes.

Tokyo Cabinet Weighs Border Action in Face Of Russian Challenge

Hitler Offers 3-Power Pledge Of Czechoslovak Independence

Would Join Paris, Moscow in Pact—if Prague Reduces Arms.

By Joseph Driscoll.

Special Cable to The Post.

London, July 22.—On the eve of important Anglo-French general staff talks in Paris, Chancellor Hitler has made a novel proposal to the British government to remove fears Czechoslovakia may be the starting point of another world war.

Hitler's proposal is that the territorial integrity of Czechoslovakia shall be guaranteed by Germany, France and Soviet Russia. In effect, this would bind those three powers in an nonaggression pact which, if faithfully observed, would keep the Germans from marching into Bohemia, as they did into Austria.

The catch in Hitler's proposal is that Czechoslovakia's independence would be guaranteed by Germany on condition Czechoslovakia make a substantial reduction in its armaments which are quite formidable for a comparatively small nation.

A second condition which Hitler attaches to his offer of a nonaggression pact is that the Prague Republic devise a satisfactory solution of the grievances of its minority of Sudeten Germans. Prague's new

Italy to Expel U.S. Newsman In Race Drive

Kleinlerer, Head of Jewish Telegraph Bureau, Gets 8 Days to Leave.

By James M. Minifie.

Special Cable to The Post.

Rome, July 22.—To the accompaniment of a nation-wide press campaign for racial purity, the Fascist government's anti-Semitic drive got under way today with an order for the expulsion of Dr. Eduardo Kleinlerer, for 14 years head here of the Jewish Telegraphic Agency of New York City, U. S. A. Dr. Kleinlerer is a Polish Jew.

While anxiety deepened among Italian Jews, the Pope condemned in strong words the new race doctrine telling a group of 200 youths of the Italian Catholic action that "Catholicism is universal, not racial, nor nationalistic, nor separatist. Extreme nationalism is something particularly detestable and being un-Christian is being less than human." The Pope's statements are not mentioned by the Italian press.

Dr. Kleinlerer was advised by the ministry of popular culture last night it would be "inopportune" for him to attend a banquet given by the Governor of Rome to the foreign press that evening. This morning he was informed he had eight days in which to get out of the country. The only reason given was "general attitude." A similarly vague answer was also given to an American diplomatic inquiry as to the reason for Dr. Kleinlerer's expulsion. Mrs. Kleinlerer, who is "Aryan-Italian," and their two children, are not affected by the order.

Dr. Kleinlerer's work was recently rewarded with an official distinction. Furthermore, in 1927 he received from the Fascist government the decoration of the knight of the crown of Italy. He is regarded here as clearly a victim of the anti-Semitic drive.

Pittman Adds Threat to Hull Mexican Note

Warns Neighbor U. S. May Use Reprisals for Land Seizures.

A new and double-pronged warning to Mexico that she must pay for expropriated land of Americans was issued yesterday on the heels of Secretary of State's note rebuking the southern republic for delay in arranging settlements, and calling for arbitration of the dispute.

Chairman Key Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, declared bluntly that Mexico would be subjected to economic penalties if she refused the arbitration proposal.

At the same time, Secretary Hull, evidencing impatience at Mexican protestations of surprise and claims that no formal note on the subject had been transmitted previously, rejected any idea of diverting attention from the main problem by taking up for discussion some minor phase of mechanics of the matter.

Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, said that if Mexico should reject the American proposal, her action would "destroy the good-neighbor policy as far as the United States and Mexico are concerned."

"Would Forfeit Aid."

"Mexico," he added, "then would forfeit all the financial and other voluntary aid we have given her through our spirit of friendship and desire for peace, prosperity and upbuilding of that country."

3 Women Lost in Ice Cave, Search Sped in New Mexico

By the Associated Press.

Santa Fe, N. Mex., July 22.—The disappearance of three women tourists in the rough inscription rock region south of Grants, N. Mex., was disclosed tonight by Gov. Clyde Tingley, who said the three had been missing since Tuesday.

Tingley identified the three as Miss Irene Tiedalue, 22, Winchester, Ky., employed at the University of Kentucky; Mrs. M. A. de La Forrest, 35, Lexington, Ky., on the University of Kentucky music faculty, and Mrs. Phillip Gibbons, Billings, Mont.

He said he was leaving immediately for Grants to aid in the investigation.

The Governor said an automobile, identified as that of the three women, had been parked at the ice caves 30 miles southwest of Grants since 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

He said the three had checked into an Albuquerque hotel late Monday afternoon and had left at 6:55 o'clock Tuesday morning for the ice caves.

The Governor said the car was locked. In it were several pieces of the women's luggage and hats, money and cigarettes.

Two State policemen were at the cave all day today. Ten more were ordered there tonight.

Cabinet Meets

By the United Press.

Tokyo, July 22.—The Japanese cabinet met tonight in an atmosphere of the most serious international tension between Japan and Soviet Russia since the Amur River incident more than a year ago to discuss Russia's blunt refusal to withdraw troops from disputed territory on the Manchukuo-Siberian border.

An official foreign office statement said the Russian attitude toward Japan's demands for withdrawal of troops and artillery from a fortified hill at Changkufeng constituted a challenge and that Japan was ready to take the necessary steps to meet the challenge.

The warlike language that has passed between the diplomatic representatives of the two countries was regarded as having raised the issue to a point where neither side may be able to back down without a serious loss of prestige.

Meanwhile, reports from the border area indicated both sides were preparing for military action. If it becomes necessary, A Domei (Japanese) Agency report from the border said five Soviet destroyers had moved into Possiet Bay, on the extreme southern tip of Siberia, and troops were pouring into the area.

An unconfirmed Chinese report from Canton said Japanese submarines were being moved northward from South China waters, supposedly in connection with the Russo-Japanese tension.

Dublin, July 22 (AP).—Douglas G. Corrigan, who made a "mistake" flight and landed in Ireland instead of California, lost his way again today when 200 laughing Irish colleens mobbed him in a Dublin street and began showering kisses upon him.

Taken by surprise, Corrigan whirled about and began fighting his way toward a car of the United States Legation.

When he finally reached the car, his face smeared with lipstick blotches and his collar and tie in disarray, the chauffeur made a fast getaway. Corrigan said it was the "most horrifying" experience of his entire transatlantic adventure.

1,000,000 Vote For Governor In Texas Today

Field of Dozen Candidates to Be Reduced to 2 for Run-off.

By the Associated Press.

Austin, Tex., July 22.—Head-wagging Texans will pick their favorites tomorrow in a Democratic primary election distinguished by side-splitting platform antics and the introduction of bucolic melody as a political issue.

An estimated more than 1,000,000 citizens will say tomorrow whether W. Lee O'Daniel, who stole the spotlight in the Governor's race, has tremendous voting support or whether his crowds simply thirsted for mountain music and prefer some one else as their nominee.

With all except two of the dozen would-be Governors certain to pass out of the picture, there was a sharp difference of opinion which pair would qualify for the run-off primary August 27.

Record Vote Forecast.

Nearly all speculation revolved about Attorney General William McCraw, Ernest O. Thompson, chairman of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission; Tom F. Hunter, of Wichita Falls, who never has received less than 220,000 votes in a State-wide race, and O'Daniel, the showman.

Despite muddy roads in many sections and forecasts of showers in others, most State officials stuck to predictions the vote would be either the heaviest or second heaviest in history.

Texas had not seen anything like O'Daniel's meteoric political ascent since James E. Ferguson, a country banker, swept to the Governor's chair in 1914.

Maverick, Sumners Up.

O'Daniel, unknown two months ago except as the sponsor of a hill-billy music program to increase sales of his flour, did not bother to outline his views on several highly controversial issues. He was content with promising everyone over 65 years old the maximum pension of $30 a month, waving war without quarter on "professional politicians" and giving his crowds mountain music in large doses.

The electorate will make choices in ten State-wide contests besides that for Governor. There is no United States Senate race.

Maury Maverick faced a hard fight to retain his Congressional seat from the San Antonio district. He is opposed by Paul Kilday, lawyer.

Representative Hatton Sumners, of the Dallas district, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, was opposed by Tom Love and Leslie Jackson.

Polling hours are from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. (Central standard time).

Philip La Follette Seeks a 4th Term

Madison, Wis., July 22 (AP).—Gov. Philip F. La Follette, cofounder of the National Progressives of America, set out today to build his political fences in the State and Nation as a candidate for an unprecedented fourth term.

Close associates said that to avoid any legal complications over the status of the Progressive Party, established in this State in 1934, La Follette would campaign under the old Wisconsin progressive label rather than the N. P. A. banner.

La Follette supporters said another victory at home would add prestige to the movement, already launched, to expand the Progressive Party on a national smale.

Sasscer to Talk At Silver Spring

Opening his campaign in Montgomery County, Lansdale G. Sasscer, president of the Maryland Senate and a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, will speak tonight at a rally at Silver Spring. The program will be held out-of-doors, on the grounds of the National Guard Armory, weather permitting.

Other speakers to be heard include Miss Ruth Shoemaker, member of the State Legislature, and Jo V. Morgan, attorney.

The rally will be held under auspices of the Sasscer Club of Montgomery County. James W. Cummings, chairman, said yesterday he had received "enthusiastic offers of support for the Sasscer-for-Governor movement in Montgomery County."

SEC Attacks Utility's Exchange of Securities

New York, July 22 (AP).—Charging violation of two New Deal statutes, the Securities and Exchange Commission filed court action today against the Associated Gas & Electric Co., testing the utility system's right to issue securities on an exchange basis without SEC registration and authorization.

Needy, Forced Off Relief Rolls, Have to Go to D. C. Poorhouse

One Woman Prefers to Risk Death Instead of Going to Home.

Forced off relief rolls by limited funds, many of Washington's needy are being driven to the Home for the Aged and Infirm, it was learned yesterday.

Many of them are not aged; some are not infirm. But all are loath to take the last step of the destitute—over the hill to the poorhouse.

More new residents entered the home at Blue Plains in the first two months of July than in all the month of June, Miss Alice Hill, head of the public assistance division, said.

"It is a heartbreaking thing," she added, "for we have to tell them they should enter Blue Plains."

These new residents of the District's poorhouse, Elwood Street, director of public welfare, explained, are those who, because of age or physical incapacity are eligible for admission. They are given their choice, he said, of entering Blue Plains when they must be denied home relief.

Appropriation Reduced.

"Our appropriation was reduced 35 per cent, effective July 1," he said, "and it was necessary to reduce our people by the same percentage. In order to do that as painlessly as possible, we are offering two classes the opportunity to enter the Home for Aged and Infirm if they want to go there. These are those over 65 who are not eligible for old-age assistance and those under 65 who are bedridden and have been receiving home relief."

So they are being told they must go to the poorhouse or do without relief. Their protests are vain; their choice is no choice at all.

Take the case of J. S. A family man and destitute, he is scheduled to be released from a Washington hospital today. He and his wife had been subsisting principally on relief checks. All that is over, though Mr. S. may enter Blue Plains, if he likes. Naturally, he doesn't like it, being only 34.

Gray-haired Miss Nellie Whisler, another whose relief checks have been cut off with an invitation to come to Blue Plains, said she will go to work—which means almost certain death—rather than go there.

"They won't send me to the poorhouse," said Miss Whisler, a proud little woman who hasn't been eating regularly lately. "Up to now I've been getting $7.40 twice a month, sometimes a little more, sometimes a little less.

Won't Go to Infirmary.

Miss Whisler was self-supporting until about four years ago, when a fall on ice aggravated a heart condition.

Yesterday she lived in a furnished room in the 100 block of Tennessee avenue northeast. Today she is moving into a place in the 1300 block of A street southeast.

"I borroewd $6 to pay half a month's rent," she said. "I think I can get a meal from neighbors once in a while. And they haven't told me I can't keep getting surplus food orders—like potatoes and butter."

The chances are she can obtain adequate medical attention at Blue Plains but there's some doubt on that point in the case of William Smith. He had no complaint yesterday either, none whatever, but he was just as insistent as Miss Whisler that Blue Plains is no place for him.

A healthy, happy, husky plate printer at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing until he was struck down by a hit-run driver in 1932, he spent a few weeks at the Home for Aged and Infirm last year and he doesn't wish to return.

In Bureau 12 Years.

"Blue Plains!" he exclaimed. "Why, this leg is doing so well that I'll be back at my trade before long if nothing interferes. Who wants to go to the poorhouse?"

Smith said he'd been a District taxpayer continuously since 1905 until his grief began to pile up. Since the accident he has spent 14 months in Emergency Hospital and two 1-year sessions at Gallinger. The brief interlude at Blue Plains terminated because he couldn't obtain out there the complex treatment which the osteomyelitis condition in his right leg requires, came between the two stays in Gallinger.

He'd been at the bureau over 12 years when he got hit by the auto. Three more years and he would have been eligible to retire for disability, obviating his present financial woes.

Miss Whisler who, like Mrs. Smith, has no relatives to look out for her, Smith and "J. S." (his wife didn't want their names used) have been on District relief. In addition, there are many others—older people—who appear to be headed for Blue Plains because they are ineligible, or can't prove their eligibility, for old age assistance under the social security act.

Admittance to Blue Plains requires only that the person have been a District resident for the last 12 months.

Cites Pitiful Case.

Miss Hill pointed out that no one is ever compelled to go to Blue Plains. "In many instances, people who at first were sure they would not like it there are now among the most satisfied residents. On the other hand, of course, there are some who always hated the place and always will.

A case in point which she cited is that of a married couple, both over 70. Once they were in comfortable circumstances, he a retired engineer and she a former school teacher. Now they are destitute and ineligible for old age assistance because they have been here only three years. Their only income is the $50 monthly pension which the wife receives as a retired teacher.

"There is a worthy case," said Miss Hill, "in spite of the fact that the law does not cover them, save that they could go to Blue Plains if they wanted to. But they do not want to, just like so many others."

'Hatred' Charged by Lilienthal In Dr. Morgan's Attacks on TVA

By the Associated Press.

Knoxville, Tenn., July 22.—Director David E. Lilienthal testified today "unreasoning suspicion, hatred and distrust" motivated Dr. Arthur E. Morgan's attack on the Administration of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Before a Congressional investigation committee, Lilienthal assailed the ousted TVA chairman for a "reckless campaign of defamation," and denied trying to suppress records by deleting statements from board minutes.

Dr. Morgan sat nearby, his face flushed under the blistering attack.

Lilienthal, who has charge of the TVA power program, emphatically denied "the TVA is selling power without knowing what that power costs."

President Roosevelt has publicly approved the theory on which the authority has based its allocation of cost of dams and reservoirs, he declared, and there has been no effort to conceal the basis for the authority's power-yardstick.

He said the basis for TVA rate-making sometimes was described as the "by-product" basis for fixing the minimum price.

"I simply recommended in fixing TVA wholesale rates," he said, "the liquidation of the actual total investment devoted to power purposes, fixed charges on that investment, including taxes, depreciation, interest and all other appropriate items, and all operating expenses, be accepted as the minimum below which those rates should not be permitted to go.

"The actual rates, I clearly recommended, should be determined with reference to other factors: the competitive source of supply, for example, the social desirability of the wide use of electricity, and the importance of substantial repayment to the Federal Treasury.

"In establishing the actual rates those factors and others would be considered in addition to the mentioned fixed and direct costs, but those costs would determine the level below which the rates should not fall. That is what I mean by the by-product theory."

Impounded Board Minutes.

Earlier, the investigators impounded board minutes and all legal opinions by TVA counsel with reference to changed entries, after a witness testified to numerous alterations.

Charles Hoffman, assistant secretary of the board, testified yesterday changes in the minutes were made "mostly by Lilienthal."

Under questioning today, Hoffman asserted all three directors, including Arthur Morgan, made revisions in the minutes, the bulk of them in the rough drafts.

Lilienthal said revisions in the minutes were made under "perfectly proper" procedure; that all directors were advised of changes and that all signed the documents.

A practice by Dr. Morgan of altering minutes without the consent or knowledge of the other directors, he said, led to the board adopting a procedure in 1937 whereby such revisions were prohibited.

Discusses Revisions.

Hoffman testified that after a conference last Sunday with Dr. Morgan and his attorney, Committee Counsel Francis Biddle asked him to make a report "on our confidential interview" and suggested that "I talk over with Mr. Fly (James Lawrence Fly, TVA general counsel) the material which we had discussed."

He said he discussed with Dr. Morgan the revisions in the board minutes.

On one occasion last December, he said, Fly criticized as "dishonest and skullduggery" his supplying Dr. Morgan (then chairman) with minutes of the board meeting."

Hoffman testified Fly instructed him to clear such requests through his office although "such a rule did not apply to the others." He accused Fly yesterday of ordering him not to "have any contact" with Dr. Morgan or his friends.

Winchester Firm To Reduce Wages

Winchester, Va., July 22 (AP).—The Virginia Woolen Co., which employs approximately 500 workers, announced today a wage reduction of 12½ per cent, effective August 1.

Directors of the plant said in a statement that two 10 per cent increases had been given voluntarily to employes since December 1, 1936, and that the workers therefore would still receive 7½ per cent more in wages than they did two years ago.

The management also said it expected to increase its present five-hour day to eight-hour shifts.

A recent order for 100,000 yards of Government uniform cloth and other orders are expected to keep the mill fully employed for many months, the board's statement said.

Sewage Plan Is Drafted For Three Md. Resorts

Oakland, Md., July 22 (AP).—Hopes of residents of three towns for a modern sanitation system were centered tonight on a plan, offered by a State health department engineer, which must await an act by the Legislature.

Ickes Approves 'Premiums' to Speed Projects

Slow-up Reported in Rate of Increase of Industrial Employment.

Additional payments to architects and engineers engaged in work preliminary to the actual start of construction on new PWA projects, to enable them to speed up their vital part of the program, were sanctioned yesterday by Secretary Ickes as Public Works Administrator.

He ordered favorable action by PWA officials on requisitions of cities to obtain funds allotted on approved projects when the municipalities can establish that they made the dirt fly and got their projects under actual construction with unusual dispatch.

To make that possible, the "premiums" may be paid by cities to their architects and engineers engaged in the preliminary work as reimbursement for extraordinary expenses which they may incur in hiring additional help, working overtime and taking other steps which will effectuate any early start.

48 Additional Projects.

The sliding scale of additional payments which are authorized varies from an increase by 10 per cent of the base fee calculated on a construction cost of $250,000 or less, to a payment of 5 per cent of the base fee calculated on a construction cost of over $1,250,000.

The number of non-Federal PWA projects under the new program was increased to 2,409 yesterday, one month after the signing of the act, by the announcement of approval of 48 additional projects. The estimated cost of $14,606,023 for these projects brought the total estimated cost of the non-Federal program to $862,334,783. Combined with the $192,939,871 allotted to Federal projects, the total for the 1938 PWA program to date is $855,274,654.

Meanwhile, a slowing down in the rate of increase in industrial employment was recorded in a Bureau of Labor Statistics report showing a decline of about 100,000 in non-agricultural employment in June.

Secretary Perkins pointed out the June decline in employment was due primarily to reductions in factory working forces, with employment conditions relatively stable except for seasonal changes in other major lines of activity.

Cites 140,000 Layoff.

"This estimated decline of 100,000 workers in private industry and regular Government work was smaller than the reductions which occurred in April and in May," the report said. "These figures do not take account of workers in agriculture or on Works Progress Administration projects and other Federal emergency projects.

"In manufacturing, it is estimated that about 140,000 wage earners were laid off between mid-May and mid-June, a reduction of 2.2 per cent. Factory pay rolls were reduced by 3.2 per cent, or approximately $4,500,000 a week. Ordinarily factory employment and pay rolls decline by about 1 per cent from May to June. Since June, 1937, when factories were operating near peak levels for the recovery movement, the number of wage earners in factories has been reduced by one-fourth, and weekly pay rolls by 35 per cent."

Employment changes were small in the nonmanufacturing industries, for the most part. Class 1 railroads reported a net addition of 9,200 men, because of increased maintenance work. This is the first increase since July, 1937.

Va. Rural Carriers Study State Roads

Fredericksburg, Va., July 22 (AP).—Virginia's secondary roads, traveled by rural letter carriers the year around, were a prime topic at opening today of their annual convention.

Representative Thomas Burch (Democrat), Virginia, told the Virginia mail carriers they could aid in the program for betterment of farm-to-market roads.

Robert Harper, secretary of the Citizens Road League; W. L. Hammersley, of Randolph, chairman of the Rural Carriers road committee, and J. Henley Walker, of Fredericksburg a district highway engineer, also spoke.

Col. Arthur W. Chase Expires in California

Col. Arthur W. Chase, 72, Coast Artillery Corps, U. S. Army, died Wednesday at Letterman General Hospital, San Francisco, the War Department announced yesterday.

After graduation from West Point, Col. Chase served in the Spanish-American War in Cuba and then was ordered to duty as paymaster of the Department of Luzon in the Philippines. He returned to the United States in 1905 and was attached first to the office of the Paymaster General and then to the Office of the Chief of Staff.

Col. Chase is survived by his wife, Mrs. Hattie B. Chase, of San Francisco.

George Hints U. S. Aide in Ga. Lost Place for Backing Him

Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes.

George also revealed that he had telegraphed protest to Lowell Mellett, executive director, National Emergency Council, saying:

"I strongly protest the dismissal of Erle Cocke as State director of the National Emergency Council and the appointment of Dr. C. H. Foreman as such director without consultation with the Georgia Senators or Congressmen.

"Dr. Foreman's resignation is purely political and will be so interpreted by the good men and women in Georgia. In the name of the people of the State I protest his appointment."

On the other hand, Mellett last night said that Cocke had not been discharged but had left the post voluntarily after becoming vice president of an Atlanta bank.

"He was on the Reconstruction Finance Corporation payroll as a regional director but served with the NEC without pay," Mellett told the Associated Press. "When he resigned the RFC job to take the banking office he offered to continue to serve in the NEC if needed, but it did not seem to me to be the ideal setup for a banking official to be one of our directors."

Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, said he would call the charge to the committee's attention adding that he will see members today to arrange for a meeting "at the earliest possible date."

Hamilton Hits Hopkins.

G. O. P. Chairman Hamilton, in a statement, referred to Thursday's declaration by Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins that 90 per cent of the 3,000,000 persons on relief rolls would vote for President Roosevelt, and added:

"If Mr. Hopkins did not have in the back of his mind an intention to promote Mr. Roosevelt for a third term, why did he make such a statement?" Then he continued:

"In view of this development reasons become clearer for the constant increase of the Federal relief rolls—now reaching a new high record—and the failure of the Roosevelt Administration to take steps to stimulate private industry. Obviously the Roosevelt Administration is seeking to perpetuate itself in power through the use of relief funds, because as the President said in 1936 'every message in a pay envelope, even if it is the truth, is a command to vote according to the will of the employer.'"

"No Future in Relief."

"Mr. Hopkins, the employer of those on relief, throws out the suggestion that it is his will that they vote for Mr. Roosevelt. When? Why, in 1940, of course. . . .

"But I am convinced the American people will repudiate at the polls this fall and in 1940 this shameless conduct. Indeed, it is very doubtful whether even those on the Federal relief rolls would vote for Mr. Roosevelt again. What these people want are self-respecting jobs in private industry. . . . They know there is neither a comfortable livelihood nor any future whatever in a job on relief. Yet that is the only thing which the New Deal offers the country."

To Study Hopkins' Talk.

Senator Sheppard said yesterday that his committee would study Hopkins' remark. Some time ago it criticized as "unfortunate" a talk in which Aubrey Williams, Hopkins' deputy, told relief workers they should keep their friends in power.

Senator George's report to the Sheppard committee stated he had received contributions of $15,430 to date and had spent $14,988. He is one of the three conservative Democratic Senators seeking re-election against whom New Deal fire is directed most seriously, the others being Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina, and Millard F. Tydings, of Maryland. George's chief opponent is United States District Attorney Lawrence Camp.

President Roosevelt is scheduled to speak at Barnesville, Ga., August 11, and is expected to urge nomination of Camp over George.

Hamilton's statement in regard to the Kansas Senatorial race recalled that in three campaigns he had fought the Ku Klux Klan, and added:

"Once again intolerance has raised its head . . . and the voters of our State cannot avoid the issue. . . . If Mr. Winrod is nominated for the United StaStes Senate, it will again be injected into the national campaign and our party in Kansas will be on the wrong side of a vital issue and opposed to our party policy in other States."

He urged Kansas Republicans to "consider the possible disastrous effects which his nomination would have upon the entire State and local Republican tickets in November."

At Topeka, Kans., however, Winrod declared that Hamilton must have been subjected to "great pressure" from "certain powerful financial interests," declaring he had been informed three weeks ago that such interests were pressing the G. O. P. chairman to make such a statement, the Associated Press reported.

Candidates Report.

"Of course, the myth regarding Nazism and Fascism built up by communist propagandists has been definitely exploded," he added.

Other Republican candidates for the seat now held by Senator George McGill, Democrat, are former Gov. Clyde Reed, the Rev. J. C. Fisher, Garden City Methodist minister, and Dallas Knapp, attorney, of Coffeyville.

The Sheppard committee, in the course of the day, received fund reports from these Senate candidates:

A. T. Stewart, Winchester, Tenn., Democrat, contributions of $4,195, expenditures of $2,300; L. J. Dickinson, Algona, Iowa, Republican, contributions of $1,778, expenditures of $2,012.68; W. W. Marland, Oklahoma City, Democrat, no contributions, expenditures of $829; Albert Hilliard, Reno, Nev., Democrat, no contributions, expenditures of $1,100; Arthur H. Day, Cleveland, Ohio, Republican, contributions of $4,065, expenditures of $3,801.39; Walter H. Anderson, Pocatello, Idaho, no contributions, expenditures of $209.64; Augustine Lonergan, Hartford, Conn., Democrat, contributions of $50, no expenditures.

Senator Alva B. Adams, Pueblo, Colo., Democrat; A. B. Lamb, Enid, Okla., Prohibitionist, and James S. Davidson, Oklahoma City, Republican, reported no contributions and no expenditures.

Judge Russell Hits George.

Atlanta, July 22 (AP).—Georgia's chief justice, Richard B. Russell, sr., today challenged President Roosevelt to speak out boldly against Senator Walter F. George in Georgia's senatorial campaign, when he speaks at Barnesville August 11.

Judge Russell, who also is the father of the State's junior Senator, Richard B. Russell, jr., issued his "invitation" to the President in a statement explaining a claim by former Gov. Eugene Talmadge that the chief justice would support him for the Senate.

"I am going to vote against Walter George," Russell said, but explained "it is not correct to say at this time who I am going to vote for in the Senate race."

The aged chief justice, who made an unsuccessful race against George 12 years ago, said:

"If the President is so weak (contrary to my expectations) that he will allow the lot of soft soap from Walter George . . . to prevent him from speaking out . . . I might be forced to vote for another candidate than Lawrence Camp."

Senator George has opposed several of the Administration's key measures, but recently has described Mr. Roosevelt as a "great and good man" and denied he "ever fought the Administration."

Philip Murray Says Republic Is a 'Cesspool'

Steel

the Labor Board, fearful of the consequences of this decision, and fearful that it had not accorded us due process of law, scurried to have the decision withdrawn (from the Third Circuit Court). We contested but they now have it back in their hands in an attempt to doctor it up to conform to that decision.

Says 23,000 Remained.

"Mr. Murray referred to the loyalty of Republic employes. Let me call to your attention that under the most trying set of circumstances in this country's industrial history, the 'Little Steel' strike of last year, 23,000 Republic employes remained at their jobs in the plant against insuperable obstacles. They were held as prisoners in the plants at Warren and Niles, the plants being surrounded by armed bands of pickets who would not even permit food to be brought in to sustain the men in the plants. We had to resort finally to the extreme measure of getting airplanes to drop food in to sustain life within the plants.

"As soon as the picket lines were made orderly, thousands of more Republic employes returned to their jobs."

Company Police Report.

In the later session of the hearings before the committee, Chairman Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), of Wisconsin, drew from Republic's police chiefs identifications of more than a score of reports from the company files from their labor spies in the various plants. This came after Police Chief J. L. Williams had denied extensive use of spies in the plants.

Williams later admitted that he had exchanged information received from his spy operatives with other companies throughout the country.

The hearings were adjourned until Wednesday morning.

Labor Spy Sues Otis.

Cleveland, July 22 (AP).—Norman Morgan, Cleveland steel worker, today sued the Otis Steel Co. for $50,000 damages, charging he was unable to obtain employment with any steel company after being dismissed from his duties as a labor spy for Otis.

Morgan, according to his petition, accused the company of breaking an oral contract with him, under the terms of which he was guaranteed lifetime employment at $250 per month.

W. H. Kahan, Morgan's attorney, said his client's activities were revealed when the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee investigated labor espionage.

Florida Union Asks Roosevelt to Run For a Third Term

Daytona Beach, Fla., July 22 (U.P.).—This north Florida resort city's Central Labor Union tonight urged organized workers of the Nation to indorse a movement to continue President Roosevelt in office for a third term.

The council, composed of representatives of 13 locals of the American Federation of Labor, with memberships totaling 800, unanimously adopted a resolution approving of a third term and giving "unqualified endorsement to all New Deal policies and accomplishments."

Officers of the union said they intended to enlist support of the 80,000 Florida members of A. F. L., and then of all central labor councils in the United States.

The Rocky Mountain Fuel & Steel workers union at Pueblo, Colo., recently urged President Roosevelt to seek a third term.

Gustaf Goes Home To Resume Work

New York, July 22 (AP).—Like any plain man going reluctantly back to work after a vacation, Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf of Sweden said a kindly goodbye tonight to the United States, before sailing for home.

He wished he could stay longer, he said, but added:

"There are always things to be done at home, you know . . . a lot of work piles up."

The Crown Princess Louise and their son, Prince Bertil, in his twenties, sailed with him.

Idahoans to Register.

Idaho voters are being notified that State and Federal employes may register by mail for the primary election until August 6, and they may vote by mail between today and August 6. The primary will be August 9. A second registration period will be between August 13 and November 5, for the general election November 8.

ThousandsHail George, Queen Back in Britain

Overtures to Reich and Anglo-French Front Raise Peace Hopes.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 22.—Thousands at Victoria Station and Buckingham Palace cheered King George VI and Queen Elizabeth tonight on their return from their four-day state visit to France.

Spectators stood 12 deep at the station when the king and queen stepped on the red-carpeted platform at 9:14 p. m. (3:14 p. m., E. S. T.).

The queen was dressed in white and the king wore a dark lounge suit, a black tie and derby hat.

Viscount Halifax, foreign secretary, took leave of their majesties as they entered their car and were driven to Buckingham Palace.

The king and queen later acknowledged the singing, roaring crowd by making an unexpected appearance on the palace balcony with their two daughters, Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose.

Hopes for Peace.

Paris, July 22 (AP).—Now that royal company has gone home, realistic French diplomats tonight counted two prime results of the four-day exchange of amenities with Britain—both of which nurtured hopes for lasting peace in Europe.

tage of the favorable occasion to encourage agreement with Germany to ease Central European tension.

Anglo-French military plans for quick, effective co-operation just in case the German settlement doesn't pan out were further co-ordinated.

The state visit of King George VI and his Scottish Queen ended at 5:35 p. m. when the royal party sailed from Calais. A French infantry band played "God Save the King," warships boomed a salute and thousands of spectators on nearby docks shouted "come back to see us again!"

Escort of Warships.

George and Elizabeth stood waving on the deck of the yacht Enchantress as she pulled away and picked up their escort of 26 French warships and naval planes for the channel crossing to Dover.

The international situation as it shapes up after the visit will be reviewed by President Lebrun and the cabinet tomorrow morning. Premier Daladier will inform the cabinet of the results of Anglo-French military talks which came on the final day.

Dedicating a monument at Villers-Bretonneux to Australia's World War dead, the King today briefly re-emphasized the Anglo-French bond—"ties that the passing years can never weaken."

War Chiefs Confer.

Paris, July 22 (U.P.).—British War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha and leaders of his general staff conferred today with French military leaders on a joint defense plan believed to involve massive British intervention on the continent in event of war.

The British war minister and his aides, flying from London to Amiens, where King George VI was dedicating a World War memorial at the end of his four-day state visit, consulted with Gen. Maurice Gamelin, generalissimo of the French armies.

The British war minister was accompanied by Gen. Viscount Gort, chief of the British general staff, and their ordnance officers, Lieut. Col. D. N. F. Wilson and Maj. J. C. Haydon.

Hore-Belisha will spend the weekend in Paris and may confer further with Gamelin and Premier Daladier, who also is minister of defense, to discuss the defense agreement reached in London.

Navy Will Spend $21,637,704 on Air And Ocean Craft

The Navy Department yesterday awarded contracts totaling $21,637,704 for the construction of four destroyers and an unrevealed number of airplanes.

The Bath Iron Works Corporation will build two of the destroyers at a cost of $5,067,000 each. They are to be delivered to the Boston Navy Yard in 28 and 30 months.

The other two vessels, costing $5,082,000 each, will be built by the Federal Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. Delivery will be made at the New York Navy Yard in 30 and 32 months.

The $1,339,704 contract for airplanes and spare parts went to the Curtis-Wright Corporation, Curtiss Aeroplane Division, Buffalo, N. Y., but officials refused to divulge either the number or type of planes to be constructed.

2 Sources Attack Brutality of Police

The executive committee of the Cleaners and Laundry Workers Union yesterday adopted a resolution condemning police killings in the District.

At the same time, Martin Chauncey, city secretary of the Communist Party, attacked the shootings. He added that a recent resolution of the Central Labor Union accusing Communists "of fomenting strife" was based on a misunderstanding.

"We regret that the resolution of the C. L. U. did not indicate any disapproval of police brutality in the District," he added.

Sworn to Die, Chinese Stay Hankow Drive

Blasted by Ships, Planes, Battalion Rolls Back Lion Hill Assaults.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), July 23.—China's famed "God of War Battalion," pledged to die to the last man rather than give way to the Japanese, today held out on Lion Hill, the "Thermopylae" of the Central China campaign, against the combined assault of Japanese land, air and sea forces in a battle that may decide the fate of Hankow.

The Chinese entrenched themselves on the precipitous hill, which guards Kiukiang and the road to Hankow, early this week and have warded off one of the most savage attacks the Japanese have unleashed since they took Shanghai.

Japanese reports admitted the Chinese troops had staged a defense "unparalleled" in the Yangtze campaign since the defense of Shanghai, but the military spokesman was hopeful the Chinese soon would be dislodged.

Planes, Ships Blast Hill.

A fleet of Japanese warships lined up in the Yangtze and pumped shells into the hill, while 50 Japanese warplanes roared overhead in relays, unloading tons of explosives on the Chinese fortifications.

Wave after wave of troops rolled against the determined lines of Chinese west of Lake Poyang and fell back in the face of machine gun and artillery fire before reaching the hill.

The Japanese military spokesman here did not indicate the position of the Japanese infantry, but Chinese reports said the Japanese troops were continuing an unsuccessful effort to reach the west bank of Lake Poyang, crossing the narrow neck leading from the lake to the Yangtze.

Lion Hill guards this strategic point and controls the road into Kiukiang. The Japanese have made a number of efforts to gain a foothold on the west bank, but have been driven off, the Chinese said.

Hidden Machine Guns.

The Chinese secreted machine gunners in moving concrete pill boxes, according to their own reports, and these formed a flexible defense line which could be drawn up at strategic places to meet the Japanese land forces.

These were augmented by cavalry, which made flying sorties on the Japanese landing parties, while the machine gunners pounded a withering fire from their "concrete nests." Hundreds of Japanese were shot as they tried to scale the banks, and others were killed or drowned as the Chinese shot their boats from under them, the Chinese reports said.

Planes Raid Kiukiang.

The Japanese naval spokesman said 27 naval bombers raided Kiukiang, demolishing a Chinese barracks and damaging defense entrenchments. The Chinese insisted, however, that their defense units had escaped punishment in the raids.

The Japanese spokesman said the naval and military air raids were designed to cut off Hankow from the rest of China, concentrating the bombing along the Canton-Hankow and Hankow-Peiping railroads.

A Japanese communique said Japanese planes had ranged over three provinces in central China, destroying rail... stations, engines and rolling stock. The communique said an unidentified freighter had been hit in a raid near Tayeh on the Yangtze and forced aground.

British Ships Searched.

Hongkong, July 23 (Saturday) (AP).—The British freighter Leana reported today she had been stopped and searched 10 miles outside Hongkong by a Japanese warship which fired a warning shot across her bow. The Leana was the first foreign ship to be fired upon during the Japanese blockade of the south China coast. A British protest was expected.

Paper Union Votes 5-Day, 40-Hour Week

Memphis, Tenn., July 22 (AP).—The International Stereotypers and Electrotypers Union voted today to establish a mandatory five-day, 40-hour week, subject to a referendum of locals.

Present union laws permit the spreading of the 40 hours over a period of six days. Under the new proposal, the international union would not sanction contracts which did not include the five-day provision.

Insect Killer Poisoned.

Miami, Fla., July 22 (AP).—The mysterious deaths of Joseph Haith, vermin-exterminator, and his 4-year-old son Calvin and illness that beset four others of the household, were described by City Health Officer George N. MacDonell today as probably due to accidental use of a poison from the father's work kit.

Bethlehem Gets Contract to Build 4 Cargo Vessels

The United States Maritime Commission today awarded to the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Ltd., of Quincy, Mass., a contract for the construction of four cargo vessels for the account of the American Export Lines for use in the Mediterranean and Black Sea service. The new ships are to cost about $2,559,000 each.

Chairman Emory S. Land pointed out this was the first order given for new ships to be owned by a private operator and under the conditions of the permanent subsidy agreements culminated by the commission and private steamship owners early this year.

The award also fulfilled one of the principal requirements under the new subsidy agreement whereby the American Export Lines agreed to construct 10 new ships during the next five years, of which four had to be ordered and on the ways before the end of this year.

Marcus Lawrence, Slain in Fight, Had Estate of $700,000

An estate of approximately $700,000 was left by Marquis J. Lawrence, wealthy one-time District resident, when he was killed in a fist fight over an Arizona girl, Odessa Webb, it was revealed when his will was filed in District court here yesterday.

Lawrence was beaten to death by Ernesto Lira on May 11 in Arizona. Lira was convicted of second-degree murder and is seeking a new trial.

The American Security & Trust Co., as administrator, filed papers showing that under a codicil to the original will, Lawrence's widow, Mrs. Jane Stout Lawrence, from whom he had been estranged, is to be excluded from the estate, although in the will she was named to receive all that was left after specific bequests were met.

His mother, Mrs. Carrie J. Lawrence, 2131 Wyoming avenue northwest, is to receive $200,000 in trust for life. A half brother, Paul J. Lawrence, of Cleveland, Ohio, is to receive the income from a $100,000 trust fund. The mother is to have her son's interest in the Wyoming avenue home.

NordmeerEnds Atlantic Flight In Trade Race

Planes of 3 Nations Moored Together; Clipper Of for Bermuda.

By the Associated Press.

Port Washington, N. Y., July 22.—The ocean-going airplanes of three powers lazed at anchor today, mute testimony to a spirited international squabble over supremacy on the Atlantic air lanes.

A British seaplane, the Mercury, arrived from Foynes, Ireland, yesterday after the first of a 1938 series of survey flights.

A German seaplane, Nordmeer, drifted into a feather-light stop today, ending the first of several proposed round trips this year in a continuation of survey flights between New York and the Azores in 1936 and 1937.

Two hours later an American flying boat, cabin crowded with passengers, plowed the waters of Manhasset Bay on a takeoff for Bermuda, a future stopping point for intercontinental transports.

Germany's 19-ton Nordmeer had arrived at 8:42 a. m., Eastern standard time, after a nonstop flight of 2,397 miles from the Azores in 17 hours 42 minutes.

It had been tossed into the air at 3 p. m., Eastern standard time, yesterday by its mother ship, the Schwabenland.

Aboard Nordmeer were Capt. Joachim von Blankenburg, veteran transatlantic flier; Copilot Otto Brix, Radioman Wilhelm Kueppers and Flight Engineer Alfred Eger.

The crew was met by Frederick von Boetticher, attache of the German Embassy in Washington, by Dr. Rudolf Jahn, New York director of Lufthansa, German flying company.

Town of 500 Sheds $200,000 Waterworks

Cardin, Okla., July 22 (U.P.).—Cardin tonight ceased to be "the highest taxed municipality in the United States," when its $200,000 waterworks and sewer system, built in anticipation of a boom that did not materialize, went from municipal to private hands. The town was ordered to surrender its incorporation papers by District Judge Ad V. Coppedge, of Miami, Okla., as the climax of a long fight by Cardin's 500-odd citizens to rid themselves of the waterworks indebtedness—intended to be borne by the thousands of persons they hoped would settle here.

Angry Loyalists SmashThrough Italian Troops

Furious Advance at Viver Follows Alleged Bombing of Refugees.

By the United Press.

Hendaye, France, July 22.—Enraged by alleged "wanton" bombings of civilians fleeing down the Teruel-Sagunto highway toward Valencia, loyalist militiamen today smashed through the Italian "Black Arrow" columns at Viver and reoccupied the Cerro Cruz heights.

With the exception of a "costly advance" by the Italians on the Alcoras sector north of the Teruel highway yesterday, today's fighting marked the fourth successive day the loyalists have riddled the combined air, tank and infantry attacks of Gen. Franco's Italians, the government said.

Loyalists dispatches claimed the insurgents, unable to penetrate Gen. Jose Miaja's "spider-web" net of fortifications along the entire Segorbe-Sagunto sections of the Teruel highway, which form the advance defenses of Valencia, had resorted to indiscriminate bombing of the highway.

Thirty-eighth women and children were reported killed by one bomb yesterday.

Planes Cross Border.

[French anti-aircraft batteries fired today on six airplanes which flew over the French border from Spain at Osseja, near Bourg-Madame, 50 miles west of Perpignan, the Associated Press said. After three shots had been fired the planes swung about and returned to Spain.

[Border guards said they believed the planes were insurgent craft which, according to border reports, bombed several towns and villages in northern Catalonia during the afternoon?—Editor's note.]

The insurgents reported two advances. They said they had driven a wedge 15 miles deep into the Mount Salada sector east of Viver and were prepared to sweep south toward Valencia or back north toward the Teruel highway to isolate Segorbe from Sagunto. They claimed to have occupied 18 square miles in Badajoz Province south and west of Madrid.

Frontier Closed.

Tarbes, France, July 22 (U.P.).—The Spanish insurgent government closed the Pyrenees frontier tonight to prevent the growing influx of Spanish refugees who were driven out of the mountain valleys into France during the fighting around Bielsa late this spring.

China, Japan Get Bulk of War Experts

Former Leads in Orders Placed in June in United States.

A large proportion of the war materials actually shipped out of the United States last month, chiefly military airplanes and equipment, went to China and Japan, with the former getting considerably more than the latter.

This movement was disclosed yesterday with the release by the State Department of munitions export records for June, giving details for the first time of actual shipments as well as of export licenses issued during the month. Among the new licenses, with shipments presumably to follow within a few months, the Netherlands Indies, close to the troubled Far Eastern war area, was designated as the destination for $4,060,073.55 worth of military supplies, chiefly aircraft.

Largest License Issue.

The Netherlands order covered the largest license issued during the month. Chinese orders disclosed by new licenses amounted to $1,236,020.54 and Japanese orders to $1,710,049. Actual shipments under previous licenses to China totaled $2,221,030 and those to Japan $1,379,128. June shipments to the Netherlands Indies amounted to only $306,509.90.

The department's record of actual exports of arms, ammunition and implements of war in June showed shipments having a total value of $5,845,402.96. In the same period, export licenses were issued covering orders amounting to $7,761,298.31.

Since no neutrality act embargo has been declared against Japan and China in the undeclared war in the Far East, it was observed, American manufacturers who have contracts from both countries for aircraft, either civil or military in design, can be forced under American laws to fulfill their construction obligations.

Heretofore the statistics in regard to the importation and exportation of arms, ammunition and implements of war which have been released each month have tabulated information concerning only licenses issued. From now on the department announced, it will be the practice to include also in these releases statistics in regard to actual exports. The information on which the statistical tables of actual exports is based will be derived from reports of collectors of customs in all parts of the country and in the outlying possessions of the United States.

Wilkerson Speaks For Laundry Union

Doxey A. Wilkerson, dean of the summer school of Howard University, was the principal speaker last night at a meeting of laundry workers held at the Phyllis Wheatley Young Women's Christian Association. He discussed the value of organization from the standpoint of education of workers as to rights and duties and responsibilities under prevailing social legislation.

Methods of attaining and maintaining a minimum wage were discussed by Margaret Buffin, president of the District Chapter of the Women's Trade Union League. A skit, representing the laundry workers' task, as written by Julia Katz, was presented by a workers' group, to show how conditions of toil within the laundry were especially conducive to lowering living standards.

Poles Mistreat Red Embassy, Soviet Protests

Aides Trailed, Visitors and Servants Arrested, Russia Declares.

By the United Press.

Moscow, July 22.—Soviet officials tonight protested to the Polish government against what was termed "intolerable police repression" of members of the Soviet Embassy in Warsaw and other Soviet representatives in Poland.

The Soviet representation complained against surveillance" of embassy employes, even those with diplomatic passports. It also was charged employes were taken to police stations by Polish authorities and required to give depositions.

The Soviet complaint said visitors to its Warsaw Embassy had been shadowed by Polish police and some arrested. Servants of Soviet Russians also had been arrested, it was charged.

Another instance of repression cited was the prevention of delivery of mails and newspapers to the representative of the Tass (official Soviet) News Agency.

The protest requested a resumption of normal relations with Soviet representatives and cessation of police repression.

Nurse Admits Operation on Mrs. Sweeny

Freed on $1,000 Bond, She Calls Fatal Antibirth Effort Her First Try.

Mrs. Ethel Mae Conner, 42, a nurse, was released on $1,000 bond yesterday after Lieut. George Darnell, of the homicide squad, announced that she admitted performing an abortion Thursday on Mrs. Justine Sweeny, 29. The nurse's address was given as 2550 Fourteenth street northwest.

Lieut. Darnell said the nurse admitted Mrs. Sweeny died during the operation. He quoted her as saying she had never tried an abortion before. The dead woman was the wife of Charles Sweeny, attorney of the Federal Trade Commission, with whom she eloped in 1931. Her father was Representative Robert Crosser, of Ohio.

Mrs. Conner will appear at an inquest Monday in the District Morgue. She was arrested after Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald discovered in an autopsy that the death was due to an abortion.

Sweeny told police he did not know Mrs. Conner. He said he had arranged to meet his wife at 4:30 p. m. Thursday at Fourteenth and Fairmont streets northwest. When she did not appear he called his home and learned she was dead.

Her body was sent last night to Cleveland for burial.

'Sitting Down' Ruled Illegal By U.S. Court

Decision Says Employer Has Right to Dismiss Plant Trespassers.

Chicago, July 22.—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals held today an employer has the right to discharge employes who seize his property in a sit-down strike.

The ruling was handed down as the court set aside a National Labor Relations Board order finding the Fansteel Metallurgical Corporation guilty of unfair labor practices.

The 2-to-1 decision held the company was not required to reinstate 92 men discharged during a sit-down strike which began February 17, 1937, in the company's North Chicago plant.

"There seems to be no denial by the board that there was ample cause for discharge," said the majority opinion, written by Judge Will M. Sparks and concurred in by Judge Walter C. Lindley.

"Indeed, in the argument before this court the board admitted that the men in conducting a sit-down strike and resisting the officers 'did a foolish and illegal act.'

"Certainly it cannot be denied that an employer is warranted in discharging his employes, and severing that relationship when they take and retain exclusive possession of his property against his will.

"They had a complete and adequate remedy . . . at the hands of the board . . . The employes, however, spurned this legal, remedy . . . and essayed to settle the difficulty according to their own sense of right and justice . . . in this they violated the law which they now seek to enforce against petitioner . . .

"We are convinced the petitioner was warranted in discharging the employes, and we are compelled to so hold in order to avoid placing our approval upon such activities as they engaged in. To do otherwise would be an injustice not only to the employer, but to the unions and their friends who wish them well."

Judge Walter E. Treanor, in a dissenting opinion, contended that possible illegal acts of the employes did not excuse "unlawful defiance of the national labor relations act" by the company.

The controversy arose from a strike in which workers seized possession of the Fansteel plant, prevented eviction once by repulsing 100 officers with fire extinguishing chemicals, sulphuric acid and steel missiles and then were driven out by tear and nauseating gas.

To Urge Appeal.

By the United Press.

General Counsel Charles Fahy, of the National Labor Relations Board, last night charged the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals at Chicago with misinterpreting the Wagner act and said he would ask the NLRB to appeal the court's reversal of the board's Fansteel Metallurgical Corporation decision.

Commenting on Judge Will M. Sparks' opinion that Fansteel workers had "violated the law which they now seek to enforce against the petitioner (Fansteel)," Fahy said there is no section of the Wagner act which an employe can violate. He also pointed out that the labor relations statute contains a specific section which provides that the act itself does not take away the employes' right to strike.

Defied by Reds, Japanese Call Cabinet Session

while denying Ambassador Mamoru Shigemitsu had "threatened the use of force," as dispatches from Moscow indicated, in the event Russia refused to withdraw her troops, nevertheless made it plain Japan would continue to insist on the withdrawal.

"Without Result."

He conceded Maxim Litvinoff, the Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, might have "received the impression" that Shigemitsu was threatening force, and declined to say whether new diplomatic efforts were planned in view of "Russia's outright refusal to concede Japan's claims the disputed hill is in Manchukuoan territory.

It was understood, however, the government is considering a new diplomatic approach to Moscow, although its nature has not been disclosed.

The foreign office spokesman issued a statement "in the form of a statement to the press" reviewing the Shigemitsu—Litvinov negotiations on the Changkufeng incident, which were described as "without result."

The statement explained Japan was "responsible" for Manchukuo-Japanese defense and the Japanese government was "naturally in a position to take necessary steps" to defend the area.

The statement said that "even under such circumstances Japan and Manchukuo had waited patiently, hoping the Soviets would be reasonable in dealing with the case."

The statement then added:

"However, Japan herewith declares her readiness to take necessary steps, and possesses the right to take such measures."

Reds Suspect Trick.

Moscow, July 22 (U.P.).—Soviet Russia, warning bluntly of its readiness to repulse any Japanese aggression along the Manchukuo frontier, tonight suspected the Tokyo government of creating an "artificial" incident crammed with grave possibilities.

Moscow left the decision between hostilities or peace to Japan, after rejecting Tokyo's demand Red army troops evacuate a lonely hill—claimed by both nations—along the border about 100 miles south of strategic Vladivostok.

Soviet leaders asserted all available documentary evidence and maps confirm Russia's claims to the militarily important hill, and that Japan appeared to have purposely precipitated the diplomatic dispute perhaps to divert attention from Japan's difficulties in her undeclared war with China.

Pravda, official Communist organ, editorially criticized a flood of rumors emanating from Berlin, Warsaw and Riga and other European capitals regarding Russian military movements, describing them as "deliberate and purposeful lies of the incendiaries of war."

Police said the Mockabee boy was standing behind a truck when a car driven by Walter Jackson, colored, 27, of 624 B street southeast, plunged against the truck, pinning the boy between the two vehicles. Jackson was charged with drunken driving and held for the coroner.

Operation Fails.

The boy was taken to Providence Hospital by Paul Barnes, 627 L street southeast. An emergency operation was performed by Dr. J. A. Cahill in an effort to have his life. He suffered internal injuries and fractures of the arm and leg. He died four hours later.

A playmate, Edward Schneider, 16, of 337 Sixth street southeast, was thrown against the truck in the collision. He was treated for a cut over his eye and sent home.

The Williams boy, whose mother would not permit him to own a toy vehicle because of their fear of traffic, was killed when a scooter borrowed from a friend carried him into the path of an automobile. Mrs. Marie H. Elsinger, 40, of 4300 Brandywine street northwest, driver of the automobile, was released in custody of her attorney for a coroner's inquest.

The death of young Davis was held accidental following an inquest at the Morgue yesterday. A coroner's jury freed the driver of the car, Newitt Vanhook, 44, colored, of the 200 block of Morton street northwest.

The death of Joseph Lee Davis, 3, of 122 F street southeast, struck down in front of his home Wednesday, was held accidental following an inquest at the Morgue yesterday. A coroner's jury freed the driver of the car, Newitt Vanhook, 44, colored, of the 200 block of Morton street northwest.

2 Drivers Held.

The jury ordered the drivers of two cars, involved in the death of Vincent J. Casey, 27, of 2325 Fifteenth street northwest, held for Police Court on charges of negligent homicide.

They were Susan Jeanne Gelder, 22, of 2325 Fifteenth street northwest, with whom Casey was riding when the cars crashed at Georgia avenue and Nicholson street northwest, and John Walter Everett, 26, of 618 Rittenhouse street northwest. They were released on $500 bond each.

An inquest was scheduled Monday in the death of Joseph Lee, 55, colored, of 666 Callan street northeast, who died Thursday in Casualty Hospital after he had been struck at Seventh and K streets northeast Wednesday by an automobile driven by Donald A. Swope, 25, of 916 Tenth street northeast. No inquest has yet been scheduled in the traffic death of 9-year-old Robert Williams, of 4602 Forty-third street northwest, who was killed Thursday.

nationality statute is now being formulated. Its publication should be a crucial test of the will to conciliation on both sides.

Hitler's proposal was delivered to the British in confidence last Monday, when the foreign secretary, Viscount Halifax, had a secret interview at his Eaton Square home with Hitler's personal aide de camp, Capt. Fritz Wiedemann. Prime Minister Chamberlain and the German Ambassador, Herbert von Dirksen, today talked over Czechoslovakia and other European problems for three-quarters of an hour. The Ambassador is leaving London tomorrow for a months vacation in Germany and will immediately report to Chancellor Hitler.

Premier Thanks Hitler.

Chamberlain is transmitting through the Ambassador a personal message of thanks to Der Fuehrer for the assurances which he relayed to the prime minister through Capt. Wiedemann. Hitler's message was that he sincerely wishes an improvement in the troubled relations between his country and Britain. He said no fundamental differences separate the German and British peoples, and any misunderstandings between them are capable of adjustment.

Hitler attempted to clear up his intentions toward Czechoslovakia by assuring the British he is as anxious as they are to promote a peaceful solution of the Sudeten German problem.

Prime Minister Chamberlain suggested to the German Ambassador the Reich should collaborate with other nations in dealing with the immense refugee problem which she herself has created.

Pessimism in political circles was increased because of a speech at Bratislava by Dr. Geza Szullo, president of the Hungarian Christian Social Party, which was interpreted in many quarters as a virtual rejection of the proposed government minority bill.

Gov. Tingley Halts Lottery Benefiting His 'Own' Hospital

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Sante Fe, N. Mex., July 22.—Gov. Clyde Tingley today halted the sale of lottery tickets issued under the sponsorship of Mrs. Oliver Harriman to benefit the hospital for crippled children which Gov. Tingley built and which is his wife's favorite 'charity.'

In a letter to Mrs. Harriman the Governor had asked that ticket sales be held up until "the program is thoroughly investigated as to its legality." In Albuquerque Mrs. Harriman said she thought "everything had been settled," that New Mexico law allowed lotteries for charitable purposes.

The Carrie Tingley Crippled Children's Hospital, was built on land donated by Hot Springs, N. Mex., of 2,750,000 bricks made at the State penitentiary. The Federal Government did the building.

Pittman Adds Penalty Threat In Mexico Crisis

chases of Mexican silver last March, after Mexico had seized valuable properties of American oil companies, and a subsequent reduction in price paid for the Mexican metal caused consternation in that country. Availability of such an economic weapon for this country, though no officials would discuss it, was in the minds of observers yesterday.

Pittman referred to statements recently made in Mexico City that the United States Government "was in sympathy with the policy being carried out by the Cardenas government in its expropriation of property, not only agrarian, but mineral also" and said the Hull note was a repudiation of such a contention.

"The oil incident," Pittman continued, "although involving some different factors, was but a continuation of similar acts committed against American farmers under the agrarian act."

Note Silent on Oil.

The Secretary had expressed a similar view at the time of the oil expropriation. His note of Thursday did not mention the oil cases, being confined to representations on behalf of several hundred Americans of small means whose farms had been taken from them by Mexico in the past 23 years. However, it was the conviction that whatever principles were raised in the farm land cases would be applied also to the oil seizures after the issue of valuation has been settled.

Hull Recalls Amity.

Questioned on a report quoting President Cardenas, of Mexico, as saying several days ago that the United States had never sent any note on the issue, Hull reminded newspapermen that the course of this Government always has been to carry on conversations and exchanges of views and information with Mexico, seeking to work out the most expeditious and earliest possible settlement of the matter on an amicable basis. While not revealing whether any previous formal note had been sent he made it clear the United States would not be diverted from its course by the raising of any question of the mechanics of procedure.

Pittman said:

"This note is but a reiteration of the numerous protests that the State Department has made to the Mexican government dealing with the violation of these principles in connection with the expropriation of thousands of farms owned by American citizens.

"The situation demanded of the Secretary of State that he send this final and positive note which requires a definite answer.

"It would be very injurious to the United States if various governments of the world were led to understand that our Government does not stand firmly upon the international doctrine set forth in Secretary Hull's note. Without the maintenance of such doctrine throughout the world, commercial intercourse would be so unsafe that it would be impractical if not impossible."

Secretary Hull conferred briefly yesterday with T. R. Armstrong, president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, saying only that it was one of a series on the subject of the Mexican seizures of American oil properties.

most existing large structures in the city fully occupied, officials recently have taken to leasing remodeled garages, when they can be done over successfully.

Garage Houses Files.

An example is the old automobile storage and sales room at Fourteenth and L streets which has been done over into attractive new quarters providing 48,000 square feet of space for the Federal Housing Administration. Old buildings on Kalorama road recently have been leased for storage of files.

Faced with the problem of leasing new quarters within legal cost limits, the Government is not anxious to advertise the space shortage, although officials concede privately it is acute. They are bound by law not to pay more than a fixed percentage of fair market value in rent calculated by District assessments and if landlords demand more District office orphans will go without.

Local owners of large private structures, on the other hand, have a problem of their own. Virtually all of the local private space suitable to the Government already has been leased. If owners remodel old properties to make them adaptable, the Government can only guarantee a lease for a year.

Army Hunting Space.

The new National Defense program is adding to the problem. The War Department is overcrowded and wants to spread out before new accommodations are completed. The Navy Department is trying to solve its own housing troubles by building two additional wings.

Against the 3,245,775 square feet of private quarters leased by the Government for its Washington family, Uncle Sam manages to provide about 14,801,533 square feet of space in his own Government buildings, an increase of only about 165,930 square feet since last year. Adding to his housing headache, no large new Federal construction is nearing completion to ease the rental load.

Medical Corps Tests.

The Navy Department announced yesterday that examinations for commissions in the Medical Corps will be held at the Medical School here and at all naval hospitals in the United States, beginning November 7. Candidates must be between the ages of 21 and 32 years and graduates of or senior medical students in Class A medical schools.

Dodd Forces Deny Attack Upon Byrd

Curt denial that the forces backing William E. Dodd, jr., for the Democratic Congressional nomination from the Eighth Virginia District are attacking Senator Byrd was denied by the Dodd-For-Congress Club last night.

"We are at a loss to know where that story originated," asserted a statement issued by the club. "To our best knowledge, Senator Byrd's name has not been mentioned in connection with the campaign for ten days.

"We are not attacking Senator Byrd. We are not attempting to straddle the fence with his supporters. We just don't acknowledge the Senator to be an issue in this primary."

Pugh Class Has Had 3 Names But Only Good-Neighbor Spirit

52-Year-Old Bible Group Has Enabled 4 to Become Ministers.

(This is the second in a series of stories on Washington Bible classes.)

Assisting worthy students to secure ministerial training is one of the outstanding services rendered by the A. B. Pugh Bible Class of Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South.

Launched by Judge E. K. Campbell, appointed Chief Justice of the United States Court of Claims by President Wilson, who became class teacher following the death of Mr. A. B. Pugh in 1916, the project has enabled four young men to prepare for the ministry. A fifth, Raymond Firth, is now enrolled at Emory University, Atlanta, Ga. This activity is supported by voluntary contributions of members.

The Rev. Albea Godbold, now associated with the Arkansas Conference, was the first student selected. Chosen later were the Rev. Herman M. Wilson, superintendent of the Home for Aged and Orphans in Gaithersburg, Md.; the Rev. Bruce F. Gannaway, pastor of a church in Haines City, Fla., and W. Lynnewood Garlick, who is now preparing for medical missionary service in Africa.

While the class has functioned under several names since it first came into being in 1886, it never has swerved from its original purpose—to promote the "good neighbor" spirit among its men. Originally known as the J. S. Gardner Class, it was named after its first teacher, a noted clergyman of the Baltimore Conference, who led the group from 1886 to 1888. During Dr. Charles A. Bulla's term of office, from 1888 to 1894, it bore the name of the Jonathan and David Class. Dr. Bulla, who died in 1932, was for many years affiliated with the central office of the general board of Christian education of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

Robert E. L. Smith, who was in charge for the next seven years, was succeeded by Mr. Arthur B. Pugh, a native of Virginia and special assistant to the Attorney General. On February 18, 1906, the class effected an organization, and has since been called the A. B. Pugh Bible Class.

A lawyer, the esteem in which Pugh was held is expressed in a tribute paid by one of his men some years back: "Pugh was a young man's man, and his influence over my life I feel today and always will." Quite an athlete in his day, the pioneer class leader aided in the formation of a baseball team among his students.

Russell E. Mitchell served from April, 1925, until October, 1928, when, under the chairmanship of S. L. Thomas, the membership increased to over 400. Thomas, former Railroad Y. M. C. A. secretary in Richmond and World War chaplain, is now engaged in social service work in Roanoke.

Elected to succeed Mr. Mitchell in 1928, Judge Eugene Black, chairman of the Court of Tax Appeals, served until 1932, when the pressure of official business compelled him to resign. Coming here in 1915 as Representative from Texas, he always has been a loyal worker in the organization, and has introduced many of his colleagues to its activities.

Judge Bolitha J. Laws, recently appointed to the District Court by President Roosevelt, was picked as the next teacher, and has since rendered service worthy of any of his distinguished predecessors at Mount Vernon Place Church, which he has attended the greater part of his life.

JUDGE BOLITHA LAWS, present teacher.

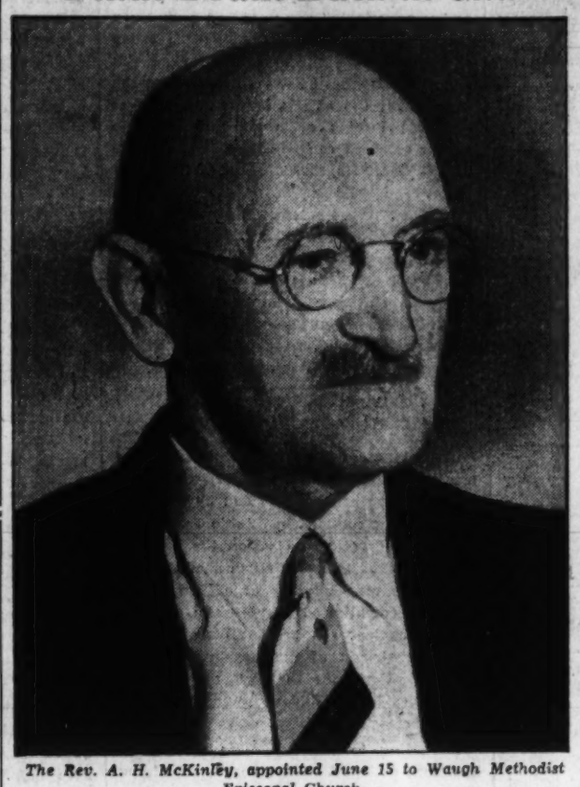
'Gunner Preacher' McKinley Finds Youth Back in Church



The Rev. A. H. McKinley, appointed June 15 to Waugh Methodist Episcopal Church.

Waugh Methodist Minister Says More Attractive Services Lure Them; Thinks It Wise to Send Them Out 'After the Adults.'

(This is the second in a series of informal sketches of ministers newly appointed to Washington churches.)

American youth is returning to the Christian religion and revitalizing it, according to the Rev. A. H. McKinley, recently appointed pastor of the Waugh Methodist Episcopal Church, Third and A streets northeast.

Formerly presiding elder of the West Baltimore Conference, embracing 98 churches, and a man who has visited almost every State in the Union, he knows whereof he speaks.

"The renewed interest of young people in church work," he said yesterday at the parsonage, "is no doubt due to the fact that the services are being made more attractive today, and that the church has come to realize that wholesome social activity is a necessary phase of its program."

A strong advocate of the Junior Church plan, the new minister feels that adult church officials should be willing to step aside to give youth the opportunity to demonstrate administrative ability. "Too often," he said, "adult teachers and others grudgingly relinquish their positions to younger persons."

During his six years' service among Baltimore congregations he found that 50 per cent of the parishioners in his conference were under 35. "I have often thought it would be a wise move to send out the young people after the adults," he commented.

Frequently dubbed the "gunner preacher" by his colleagues, the cleric spends vacation hours at his cabin on the Cacapon River, in West Virginia, where he can indulge in his favorite avocations—wild game hunting and trout fishing.

"I'm very fond of baseball, too," he admitted, "and probably would have turned out to be a professional player but for the wisdom of my mother."

The Rev. McKinley is no stranger to Washington, having filled the pulpit of Douglas Memorial Church for seven years, prior to being elevated to the position of presiding elder. His first pastorate was in Shepherdstown, W. Va., seat of Shepherd College, and later he assumed charge of a church in Keyser, W. Va.

In the field of literature, he admires the works of Lloyd C. (Green Light) Douglas, and thinks that the film producers have done a fine job in transposing his books to the screen. He and his wife enjoy travel, and have toured America several times. They have no children. The Rev. Mr. McKinley was raised in Hancock, Md.

When The Shoe Pinches.

Secretary Ickes' attempt to pillory Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, because the latter favors commercial export of helium to nations building lighter-than-air craft, indicates how sensitive the Secretary has become to criticism on this issue. If Mr. Ickes had not felt an urgent need to defend the position he has taken, he probably would not have first misinterpreted Commander Rosendahl's statement and then ridiculed him for allegedly changing his views.

What Commander Rosendahl said is that the dirigible has no importance in European armaments today. In America, he added, the situation is entirely different because this country has vast coast lines and can use the airship for patrol purposes. That statement seems to be in complete harmony with what the commander, who is in charge of the Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, told the Senate Naval Affairs Committee last April 12. "Also," he said on that occasion, "the airship fits into today's scheme of defense for only a few nations, but the United States unquestionably is one of these."

Naval commanders as well as other Government officials have full right to change their opinions without the permission of Secretary Ickes. If Commander Rosendahl did so, and he denies it, the change evidently took place before he was "wined and dined" in Germany. A guilty conscience is the best explanation for so cheap a slur at the expense of an officer and a gentleman who can show, if he is so minded, that Secretary Ickes has also changed his mind in regard to helium exports.

What probably aroused Mr. Ickes was the authoritative nature of Commander Rosendahl's opinion that Germany could be granted sufficient helium to operate her new dirigible without any danger of arming that country with a new military weapon. The law instructs Secretary Ickes not to permit "accumulations of helium in quantities of military importance in any foreign country." The weakness of his position is that he sets his own biased judgment above that of our military and naval experts in deciding what would constitute such "accumulations."

By this arbitrary conduct he interprets a law specifically designed to permit the export of helium, under proper safeguards, to mean that no helium shall be allowed to foreign commercial aircraft. The really "curious thing" about the situation is Secretary Ickes' pretense that this unreasonable attitude is in conformity with the intent of the legislation under which he exercises this power.

Bluff And Counterbluff.

In the 13 months since Japan and Russia threatened to go to war over the possession of two unimportant islands in the Amur, there has been a decided change in the balance of power in the Far East.

Outwardly Japan remains the dominant nation. Her troops are in occupation of Peiping, Tientsin, Shanghai, Nanking and many other important Chinese cities and are pressing hard in the direction of Hankow. Her fleet commands the Chinese coast. Yet actually Japan today is much weaker than she was a year ago. She has used up her substance in a ruinous war which is still far from being won. Tokyo's bark, therefore, is being discounted because her bite is no longer feared as it was in the past.

This is revealed in the attitude Japan has displayed with respect to the latest Japanese-Russian clash on the Manchukuo-Siberian border. At the time of the Amur flare-up, on June 30, 1937, a Russian gunboat was sunk, another beached and a third put to flight by Japanese-Manchukuoan artillery. But the Russians showed no fight. They were not willing, either for the sake of an unimportant stretch of territory or to maintain their prestige, to risk a war with Japan.

Having tested Russia's readiness to resist encroachments and found the Soviet on the defensive, the Japanese army was persuaded that action in North China could be undertaken without any fear that it would be followed by joint Chinese-Russian counteraction. Recent developments along the Manchukuo-Siberian border have revealed, however, that Russia's attitude has undergone some stiffening. It may now be Japan's turn to back down.

Such a course will not, of course, be easy for the island empire to pursue. "Face" counts for much in the Far East. And having threatened the Russians that "necessary steps" would be taken "with firm determination" unless the Moscow government gives way to Tokyo's demands, Japan cannot easily eat crow.

That is why, following Russia's rejection of the Japanese protests as "unjustifiable and unacceptable" one unnamed spokesman informed the press that Japan "is ready and has every right to take all necessary steps" to safeguard her rights. But, at the same time, the official spokesman for the Japanese foreign office asserted that the border question can be disregarded for the time being. No threat of force had been made.

Which of these points of view will govern Japan's conduct toward Russia in the near future is not yet clear. If Japan has her hands full in China it is also true that the efficiency and patriotism of purge-ridden Russia are very questionable. Both sides are bluffing, and when that is true hostilities are unlikely, regardless of strong words.

Spotlight On The TVA.

Reports from Knoxville emphasize the magnitude as well as the importance of the task that has been undertaken by the TVA investigating committee. Aside from vital questions of policy, on which the committee is expected to throw much needed light, it has the responsibility of shifting truth from the complicated charges and countercharges against the present directors and former chairman of the Authority. Present indications are that when the whole story is told it will leave some officials in an embarrassing position.

According to the testimony of Charles Hoffman, assistant to the board, all of the directors indulged in changing the minutes. Most of the changes, he said, were ordered by David E. Lilienthal. TVA files are said to reveal 15 or 20 instances in which the minutes were altered. While Mr. Hoffman says the revised minutes were approved by all the directors, former Chairman Morgan apparently did not know, in some cases, that alterations had been made.

Mr. Lilienthal has attempted to explain the two changes which appear to be of the greatest significance. Regarding his report on negotiations with Wendell L. Willkie, president of the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation, Mr. Lilienthal claims that the secretary of the board did not accurately summarize his report in writing up the minutes. The other entry concerned Mr. Lilienthal's appeal to Secretary Ickes for "immediate action" on the application of two Alabama towns for PWA power plant loans. In this case, he contends that nothing was concealed by the deletion.

It remains for the investigating committee to probe to the bottom of this suspicious practice. The present explanation of Mr. Lilienthal seems inadequate. If the minutes covering his negotiations with Mr. Willkie were inaccurate, for example, why did he not correct them instead of eliminating all reference to that conference? Whether or not Mr. Lilienthal's appeal for PWA funds for two Alabama towns was material to the suit of 18 power companies against the TVA, it is certainly vital information that Congress, the President and the public should have. Its deletion from the record still calls for a candid explanation.

When these changes of the record are coupled with orders from James L. Fly, general counsel of the TVA, forbidding employes of that agency to have any contact with the former chairman, they arouse a strong suspicion that the board is afraid to let the truth be known. The investigating committee has done well to impound the TVA's minutes and legal opinions regarding alteration of those records. Liberalization of the "muzzling" rules applied to TVA employes also improves the prospects of a fair investigation.

The committee would have made a much better impression, however, if it had taken this obviously desirable action without being prodded by its minority members.

The Right To Discriminate.

In the New York State constitutional convention this week, a solitary voice was raised against the proposed antidiscrimination amendment. It was that of William J. Wallin, vice chancellor of the board of regents of New York University. Mr. Wallin, in effect, asked the delegates not to discriminate against discriminators. He called the amendment an "invasion of liberty" and suggested that no law can be made strong enough to eliminate successfully certain inherited prejudices.

His words had little or no effect upon the delegates. By a huge majority they voted to advance the amendment to a third reading. Mr. Wallin's objections were regarded as at best quibbles and at worst "a vicious doctrine." Nevertheless, at least one point raised by him is well worth considering.

In its present form, the amendment, after granting full legal equality to all residents of the State, provides that "no person shall because of race, color, creed, or religion be subjected to any discrimination by any other person, or by any firm, corporation or institution . . ." Mr. Wallin pointed out that a literal construction of this clause would require, for instance, that a Catholic theological seminary must admit non-Catholics, agnostics, or even atheists, should they take it into their heads to apply.

He might have gone further. He might have suggested that a literal interpretation of the amendment would make it unconstitutional for a Broadway theatrical producer to assemble a chorus limited to blondes. He might also have said that it would seem to require the Harvard Club, of New York, to admit graduates of Howard University to membership, or vice versa.

Such possibilities may not be contemplated by the amendment. But in drafting a constitution it is the unexpected rather than the probable contingency which must be considered. And it is not at all difficult to make the terms of a law so sweeping as to defeat its primary intention.

The intention of the amendment, presumably, is to end or prevent all unjust discriminatory practices in State-supported schools and public offices. That in itself is taking in a lot of territory. The New York lawgivers would be well advised to define the phraseology so as not to take in a lot of headaches as well.

Good Neighbors?

Yesterday recorded two major items of Pan-American news—the signature of a peace treaty between Bolivia and Paraguay, and the delivery of a note from the United States to Mexico discussing the matter of expropriation. The one gives occasion for universal satisfaction while the other brings to a head a delicate international controversy. Nevertheless, the two have a common and important significance. Both testify that the New World has not abandoned consultation as the formula for peace.

As indicated by the promised solution of the Bolivia-Paraguay dispute, confidence in mediation is not only alive in the Western Hemisphere, but perhaps is even growing. At least, where the President of only one country—Rutherford Hayes of the United States—was invited to settle an earlier Chaco dispute, in 1938 six countries have been summoned to arbitrate those countries' claims.

As regards Secretary Hull's note to the Cardenas government, it had been predicted for many months, if not years. Since the publication of the Mexican constitution in 1917, the rights of individuals as against the interest of the government have been vague. In the case of foreigners, this vagueness has resulted too often in the seizure of property with barest promises of indemnity. Beginning with the so-called Bucareli conferences in 1923 and running down through the patient efforts of Dwight Morrow and the interminable sessions of several claims commissions, this country has endeavored to convert these promises into cash, but with small success.

Then, in March of this year, Mexico suddenly took over all foreign-owned petroleum properties. It was the last straw. Even earlier Department of State officials had been hinting broadly that the "good neighbor" policy has a bilateral significance, a point that was re-emphasized only a few weeks ago by the President. Still Mexico was evasive. Meantime the ease with which Uncle Sam could be put off had been noted by other countries in the difficult throes of modifying their quasi-colonial economies. Others began trying to take advantage of the good neighbor policy. Plainly, some word from Washington was overdue.

Now at last it has been suggested to Mexico in tones of complete friendliness but also of emphatic firmness that she submit the matter to arbitration as provided in a treaty signed in 1929. If there is good reason for Mexico's disregard of what appear under every code of international law as her just debts, let her state it; if not, let her pay up. This, in effect, is Secretary Hull's reasonable demand. On the reaction in southern capitals hinges in large measure the "good neighborliness" of the Americas.

House Divided.

Owen Wister represented, even better perhaps than any of his contemporaries, what the sardonic Santayana called "The Genteel Tradition." His was a personality divided against itself—divided by the necessity at all costs of a Philadelphia Brahmin to be respectable, and the necessity at all costs of an artist to be what God has made him. Possibly he inherited his conflict. Perhaps in his nature was repeated something of the long emotional struggle that wrecked the marriage of his greatly gifted and intelligent grandmother, Fanny Kemble, and his highly respectable and not so intelligent grandfather.

Unquestionably, Wister inherited something of the Kemble genius. As a child he wrote melodies and dreamed of being a great composer. At Harvard he was graduated with highest honors in music. At Paris he played before the great Liszt, who acknowledged his "pronounced talent." Nevertheless, Wister abandoned music for the law on the ground that "American respectability accepted lawyers, no matter how bad," but not composers.

But this decision of Wister, the born Brahmin, must have been more than Wister, the born artist, could endure. Under a little Blackstone his health broke and the neurologist-novelist Weir Mitchell sent him to still wild and woolly Wyoming to regain his health. He had already been amazing himself by scribbling, not "seriously" however. In the end literature seems to have become at the same time an escape from the law and a concession to art.

Thirty years ago almost any contemporary critic might have placed Wister with Howells and Hamlin Garland among the foremost American novelists of their time. Few contemporary critics would place any of the three in that category. Among this generation of readers Wister, if he is known at all, is known as the author of a once tremendously popular "Western." Or perhaps he is known merely as the author of six now famous words: "When you call me that, smile." These words embody a lesson in how to make four still more famous words at once "respectable"—and unimportant.

Religious Indifferentism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A letter under the heading of "Christian Unity" appeared recently in The Post. In it the author supported the very questionable claim of one moral code being as good as another, and criticized "any one church organization" that "can separate itself on the basis that there can be but one distinct, named, ecclesiastically controlled church body."

Presumably, the statement alluded to Catholicism, in as much as that church has retained its dogmas completely and without modification since the time it received its commission from Christ to "go and teach all nations." Because it is inflexibly dedicated to preserving the word of God intact from errors of human interpretation, and supported in that platform by a direct scriptural assurance of God's guidance, it suffers attack from those who object to its consistency of belief.

The Catholic Church condemns modern indifferentism in religious belief in the name of sacred Scripture, of Christian tradition, and reason itself. To assert that God is indifferent to variations of belief, truth as well as error, is poor logic. To say that basic issues of ethics, of social as well as of religious significance, such as divorce, remarriage, birth control, whether Jesus Christ is God or just a man, are immaterial difference is to deny truth altogether. On these issues Catholicism stands infallibly insistent, because her divine mandate precludes her departing one step from revealed truth. Not with any arrogance, but with a steady adherence to principle and logic, does she deny that God could have revealed a multitude of changing Christianities.

It has always preached the virtues, in practice; it has taught, and will continue to teach also the importance of unity of faith, in principle as well. For the man who says first, "It does not make any difference what a man believes," is led logically to say, "It does not make any difference what a man does." This kind of philosophy is as shifting as sand; certainly in morals becomes impossible, and a chaotic immorality results.

Germans In Czechoslovakia.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In Walter Lippmann's column in The Post of July 19 there appears the statement that the Germans of Czechoslovakia "have not equal opportunity in the government service; they have just grievances about schools, language, and perhaps about the allocation of public funds."

The fact is that the Germans of Czechoslovakia have virtually a complete school system of their own, from elementary schools on through all the various intermediate stages to schools of collegiate rank. They have even a university, taught entirely in their own language, by teachers of their own nationality, and supported by taxation (that is, they are public schools). There is no other country in the world where a German minority or a minority of any kind enjoys such advantages. They certainly do not have such advantages in this country. Wherever there is a German or other foreign-language school in this country it is privately supported and privately maintained.

That they do not have "equal opportunity in the government service" (in Czechoslovakia) is partly due to the fact that for a long time they refused to co-operate with the majority, and partly because they have failed to qualify themselves for such positions. And again, where else in the world is any minority allotted a definite place in the government service or a definite proportion of the public funds? Certainly it is not done in this country. And it certainly is not done in Germany.

State Medicine Criticism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the current discussions of socialized medicine, it seems to me that too high a value is put on the medical care which a patient gets from a doctor-on-a-salary. Briefly, I should like to sketch an unhappy contact which I had during the past year with State-controlled medical practice.

A friend of mine in a State not so far from Washington, D. C., had suffered a nervous breakdown brought about by long years of monotonous work and self-sacrifice. As she did not have the money for private hospitalization, she was placed in the State hospital. When she grew steadily worse, and death was imminent, I received a letter from a relative saying that she wished to see me. So I went immediately by the first train I could get.

Before being allowed to see her, I had to get permission of the doctor in charge of the institution. Never shall I forget that interview. He was so patently uninterested in her as a human being and—this is more to the point—uninterested in her case. He expressed irritation because someone had telephoned him at his house the preceding night to make inquiry about her condition. He said when he left the hospital he didn't want to have to think about sickness until the next day.

When I asked him what I could do that might be helpful, he shrugged his shoulders and said, "Oh, if you can find any way to help that sort of patient, we will give you a job here!"

When I was finally admitted to her room, she was the most pitiful person I have ever seen—it is a nightmare now to remember it, and to remember how she said over and over, "If only I could die." Two days later, thank God, she did die and escape from that heartless prison.

The experience taught me one lesson. It is this. If ever I am ill, and find myself reduced to dependence on medical help from a doctor-on-a-salary, a doctor who is merely doing a "job" and doesn't want to think about the job after office hours—well, I know where there are some good deep rivers to jump in. Death can be far more merciful than a politically appointed so-called "doctor."

On Jester-Pilots.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Other compasses seem to be in greater need of adjustment than does that of Mr. Corrigan.

Not every jester-pilot who having announced one course pursues another will bring the vessel under his control to so happy and safe a landing as did he.

Mr. Corrigan's views concerning money seem also to be straightforward and in accord with those of that good physician who last year in advising a class of neophytes just about to be released to practice his profession informed them that: "Money is refuse, the by-product of a life lost in thought and investigation."

These men do not seem to realize—what every good jester-pilot should know—that money is a call on goods, and that it may be so employed as to strip producers of their products and donate them to others who may be relied upon to continue the licenses of jester-pilots to control ships.

Emigrants To America.

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: Your correspondent who signs himself "Americus" writes about "our ancestors who came from comfortable English villages for idealism." He overlooks the fact that some of our ancestors also came from their comfortable villages in other lands for similar reasons. We have ancestors who came about the same time and even sooner from Spain, Germany, Italy, Norwegian countries and elsewhere.

Some even came from China and Africa. I saw in studying some old military records of the American Revolution that several Negroes were carried on the company rolls of some of the colonial regiments. There were Chinese in California even before the gold rush days when hordes of Eastern Americans swarmed to our Western shore for "idealism," and left the East to the newly arrived immigrants.

As a descendant of Anglo-Saxon foreigners who came here over 300 years ago, I disagree with "Americus" that we can't like the newly arrived Americans who simply happened to be born a couple of centuries too late for us to see any good in them. Instead of wanting to come here to get something for nothing which others had made possible (as "Americus" claims), I believe that the greater portion of those foreigners who hope to come to America, are guided by the same deep longing for a land of peace, freedom, and opportunity which led their ancestors here to become our common ancestors.

If the foreigners who came over as "Americus" says, "to a land of wealth and leisure and luxury—to get something for nothing" really had no more ambition or idealism than that, I wonder how much they were influenced by American steamship agents (of a new industry seeking new fields) with their exciting tales of America as a land of milk and honey where the streets were paved with gold, and by American industrialists seeking cheaper labor than provided by Americans who would work only long enough to outfit themselves to pioneer into the free lands of the West.

The foreigner who came here seeking something for nothing now has an American descendant who sends his money to Europe (via sweepstakes tickets) seeking something for nothing. VESPUCIUS.

Another Friend Of Mailmen.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since reading the recent comments of "L. L.," the mailman's friend, I have been wondering if it is possible that he has inadvertently divulged the deep, dark secret of how Mr. Farley has made the Postoffice such a marvelous financial success, as it was glowingly pictured in the papers a few days ago. Can it be possible that by practicing petty economies and steam-pressuring the hardest working men the Government employs, Mr. Farley is capturing undeserved praise?

I have been told by a reliable source that on two of the hottest days this summer (last week), when thousands of Government clerks were released early because of the heat, in certain stations regular men were obliged in the hot afternoons because the mail was a little light, to "double up;" that is, to carry two routes. This procedure released the subs (without pay) who look after the mail on the regular men's day off. Can you conceive such a condition existing in any other department? Imagine Mr. Ickes or Mr. Wallace furloughing men without pay when work was a trifle slack, and making one clerk do the work of two! The mail-carrier has a day off and works for it, I am told, so the bosses may get a little credit for "economy"—and the big boss thus builds up his great paying business. As "L. L." says, with millions out of work, why?

From another mailman's friend,

The Post Impressionist

Disillusionment.

I recall well the day he left Washington for the South. He dropped in to see me on his way to the station, a prepossessing man of 35 years, whose entire life, before coming to the Nation's Capital to assume duties as a Federal employe, had been spent in, or States adjacent to, his native Maine.

He seemed more pepped up than usual. "I'm going to see," he said with an engaging smile, "if it's true what they say about Dixie.' I'm going to prove to my own satisfaction that there the moon shines with more mellowness, that the mockingbird and whippoorwill are the sweetest of all our feathered songsters, that its winds carry a more exotic fragrance, and that the mint julep is the most seductive of all our drinks. I've heard of these in song and poetry and prose. All have, through some subtle touch, awakened a yearning within me—an irresistible desire to bask in this reputed Utopia."

Having undergone many disappointments on similar such pilgrimages because of a lack of unfolding surroundings, I questioned him:

"You expect," I asked, "to find all these verifications from within a hotel room, or scooting about in autos?"

"Gosh, no!"

"How, then?"

"An old schoolmate—he came North to play football for us—has invited me to visit him. He's a civil engineer. Working hard, he writes me, to eke out a living, manages to maintain his own modest home on the outskirts of a North Carolina City. 'We're in the woods,' he said, 'though the street is paved and a cement sidewalk parallels it. You'll hear the birds at daybreak, and their evensong; the cock crow at dead of night, the baying of hounds on their quests through the forest; you'll near swoon from the delicate scent of pine and a myriad commingled aromas from native flowers wafted on a soft, summer breeze; you'll meditate all these and more while stretched lazily on an easy-running glider couch or day-dreaming at night abed——'"

"An engineer wrote you that?" I queried.

"Well, no; not exactly," quite truthfully, "but he inferred it. I must have, I suppose, drawn slightly upon my imagination—you know: the songs and the poetry and the prose with descriptive passages——".

He returned six weeks later—brown as a road shoveler, physically fit.

"Ho!" I greeted him, "the prospector returns and from his looks I'd say the South has won."

He dropped into a chair, lighted a cigarette, then relaxed.

"It was wonderful," he said between puffs—wonderful."

"Paeans of the South via poetry, prose and song stand vindicated?"

A slight frown clouded his brow, then: "The birds and the moon and the fragrance and the definite yet reserved hospitality of the people, and the——"

"But?" I interposed, sensing that some one important expectation had not materialized.

"The mint juleps," he said succinctly.

"Disappointing?"

"No-o, not exactly."

"How then?" I pressed.

His eyes took on a far-away look for a moment, as if he were dreaming. I pictured in my own mind his mental processes—a tall, frosted glass filled with clinking ice and sprays of refreshingly pungent mint. What, I kept asking myself, is wrong with this entrancing brain imagery?

"Did you ever," he asked at last, "watch a host spend the better part of 10 minutes concocting these most delectable of drinks?"

"Yes, many times," I acknowledged.

"And then, when they were, after many a teaspoon sip for testing, pronounced satisfactory, been handed one and admonished not to drink it until the nose had sniffed deeply of its invigorating smell?"

"Of course," I admitted, "the aroma—the smell—is a part of its deliciousness."

"And then," he continued, "were you invited to sit on the porch or the lawn and enjoy to the fullest and in quiet contentment this most seductive of beverages, or were you warned—warned mind you!—to remain in the kitchen until the last drop had been drained?"

I laughed heartily. It was all too plain to me, this disappointment of his.

"The neighbors?" I ventured.

"Gosh, yes," he complained. "I'll tell you what, my good Southern friend, I've never seen the like of it since Prohibition days. Every bottle bore the requisite revenue stamps, yet I felt a criminal at each swallow, so secretive were the proceedings. Teetotalers all, my neighbors,' confided the host. And just outside, in the shade of massive oaks and set upon a velvet-like greensward, were chairs designed by a gent superior in his knowledge of what it takes for lolling and lounging, where one could have sipped and meditated or chatted companionably at peace with the world, as I, from lore, had pictured it all."

"I'll bet," I said, "that it's the same in Pohick, Maine."

Yes," he admitted reluctantly. Then: "But we don't sing songs about it, and pen poetry and prose extolling it—then let the traveler down."

Fair Enough

Preaching And Practice.

IT PAINS ME to say so, but it occurs to me that the press of our country, alert and diligent as it always has been to investigate other elements of the community, almost never investigates itself. We investigate and expose and often reform evils in politics and business, we unmask foul plotters against the peace and purse of the people, and we supplement the police, sometimes to their honest annoyance but sometimes to their guilty embarrassment, in the pursuit of murderers and scoundrels of other kinds. We have goaded bashful prosecutors and Governors to their duty, sent grafting mayors to prison and mountebanks to oblivion, broken up gangs, reduced utility rates and, with a fairly accurate instinct for the jugular, have denounced cunning and complicated frauds on the taxpayers before or after the fact.

PEGLER.

But all this time there has existed among the publishers, with exceptions too trivial to mention, a sort of unspoken understanding or gentlemen's agreement to refrain from investigating rival newspapers or publicizing matters of news interest too well known to require investigation, I do not refer to incidents in the private lives of the proprietors, although there have been such affairs surely no less newsy and sensational than similar goings-on in the private lives of comparatively obscure individuals which constitute news by any city editor's rule.

WHAT I HAVE in mind is something on the order of the fearless denunciation of the hypocritical or venal political boss or official, I think that, as a small example, when a paper supports a certain political ticket with the understanding that it will receive the time-honored graft of the public notices, the opposition paper should holler "Copper!" on its rival. Or if a paper hires a professional murderer to organize a gang of killers to fight a circulation war and its rival does likewise, the papers of the other towns should send reporters in and give the story a wild ride, the wilder if either of the papers involved should have the audacity to complain of crime in town.

The hypothetical cases which could be cited on the basis of known performance are many and of great variety, but all the time, certainly always since I entered the business, there has been a taboo on such stories. Publishers may hate the very tripes of one another, personally and politically, and still respect a silent, instinctive understanding to lay off. It is an exaggerated observance of the old saying that it is an evil bird which fouls its own nest.

• • • •

IF PUBLISHERS did not treat one another so courteously, like Senators on the floor of the most exclusive gentlemen's club in the world (Laughter), the press would be better off today, because the papers would have kept one another in line by the threat of the same kind of publicity that politicians fear.

I hope I do not give the impression that publishers are rascals by trade, with terrible records of unrevealed sins, but in a press as large as ours in this country, with ownership or control open to any person or interest with sufficient money, regardless of character or motives, chicanery is inevitable. And the square publishers, having nothing to fear or gain by silence, should treat misconduct, hypocrisy and false motives in the press the same as they treat such doings in other lines. Failing to do this—and they do fail—they shirk a portion of the duty which accompanies the privilege of a free press and encourage their ruthless brethren in activities which react on the press as a whole.

I think the papers ought to take picks on one another in their editorial columns, as editors did in a day before my time, and launder their linen as they go along instead of permitting a whole hamper of stuff to accumulate, to be put through the wringer and perhaps torn into shreds by some Congressional committee. I think they ought to abandon the clubby mutual forbearance which makes such a rarity of a newspaper story or editorial about another newspaper. In this connection I would say that the story of the bitter fight between the Newspaper Guild and many publishers should have been treated not as a private family row, but as public news all along. Such suppression gives rise to the suspicion that the press believes in publicity for the embarrassment of everybody and every institution but itself.

• • • •

THE PRESS is one of the greatest investigating bodies in the country. We have grand juries and legislative and Congressional committees as official bodies and the press as an unofficial investigator. Lacking official authority, we are hampered in our delving, but it is more than strange that our zeal for investigation and challenge so rarely extends to our own interesting affairs.

Dale Carnegie In The Alps.

("Dale Carnegie, author of 'How to Win Friends and Influence People,' sails to climb Swiss Alps."—News item.)

The scene is a high peak in the Alps. Mr. Carnegie and a big party have started out on the ascent, but he is now alone with the guide.

Carnegie—Are we nearly at the top?

Guide—I think so.

Carnegie—You think so! You'll never inspire confidence in anybody that way. You've got to be more positive. You must radiate more assurance.

(The guide makes no reply and stands peering into space. He seems quite worried.)

Carnegie—What are you looking at?

Guide—Nothing.

Carnegie—That's a confession of futility. It's a fatal error. People won't like you.

Guide (sadly)—What people?

Carnegie—Any people. By the way, where are those other people who started out with us?

Guide—They, er, seem to have left us.

Carnegie (stung)—Oh, come now, don't be absurd. Leave us! Why should they do that?

Guide—Maybe they just didn't like us.

Carnegie (wincing at such an incredible thought)—You say the darndest things. Listen, you're holding back something. Was there an accident? Why don't you tell me the worst?

Guide—Well, I read your book. It very clearly pointed out the disadvantages of being a killjoy. I thought you knew there had been a mishap.

Carnegie—I wasn't paying attention to what was going on behind me! I was toiling onward, upward, my eyes to the stars looking into the future, confident, full of cheer . . . you'll find the rest of it on page 345, twentieth publication. And, anyhow, there was nothing from you to indicate any trouble. You never once stopped smiling.

Guide—Mr. Carnegie, after reading your book I could hardly fail in that respect!

• • • •

Carnegie (peering off into the distance and realizing more than ever that he and the guide are stranded)—Not a friend in sight!

Guide (sadly)—Not one.

Carnegie—But you are my friend, aren't you?

Guide—There you go . . . always trying to influence me!

• • • •

(A St. Bernard dog is seen in the distance. Mr. Carnegie whistles frantically. The dog pays no attention. The guide whistles. The dog looks the other way. They both whistle. The dog trots back from where he came.)

Mr. Carnegie—In all my experience I never heard of anything like this. It's contrary to all my writings. What do you make of it?

Guide—That dog don't like us!

Fair Warning!

The corn-on-cob days now are here—
Soon buttered will be every ear;
All thru the next few torrid weeks
There will be few unbuttered cheeks.

Walter Lippmann

Observer In Europe Reports Franco-British Entente Winning Other Nations Away From Hitler's Entourage.

Paris.

IT WOULD BE too much to say that all the French and all the British now see eye to eye on the problems of Europe. For in both countries there are influential factions seeking for one reason or another to push their governments toward separate action. Thus there are Frenchmen of the Left who would rather support the Spanish Republicans than maintain the entente with Britain and there are British Conservatives who would like to make an agreement with Hitler by giving him a free hand in eastern Europe. But today, largely as the result of the Austrian conquest, the great majority in both countries realize that the deadliest danger to both peoples is their disunion, that their paramount interest in these times is always to find a common policy and always to act together.

LIPPMANN.

In order to act together each of the two partners is being compelled to modify somewhat its normal approach to European questions. Thus in regard to the crucial problem of Czechoslovakia, the French start with the traditional idea that the Czech must be able to resist the creation of a pan-German empire in eastern Europe. The British, on the other hand, start with the traditional feeling that they are vitally interested in Europe only up to the Rhine. Thus the tendency of French policy would be to urge the Czech to make no important concession to Germany and the tendency of British policy would be to abandon the Czech to German aggression.

But neither France nor Britain can afford to follow its traditional line. The French cannot risk war with Germany unless they are sure of British support. And the British cannot run the risk of having France destroyed as a great power. For then they would have no one to defend them on the Rhine. So each is compelled to alter its prejudices and to find a common line.

Agreement Close On Czech Dilemma.

THE PRESENT Franco-British entente, which was founded at the end of April when the French ministers visited London, marks the determination not to fight if they can help it but to fight together if they must. The two governments have almost reached a common line in regard to Czechoslovakia. They have agreed that the Czechs must concede a very great deal to the Sudeten Germans but that the Czechs do not have to make concessions which would dismember the Czechoslovak Republic or give the Reich control through the German minority of Czech foreign policy. They have agreed that if the Czechs are attacked after making reasonable concessions, the French will honor their treaty obligations and mobilize, and that the British will follow.

This is very near to being a complete program on the most vital issue confronting Europe. It is not quite complete, however. For while it is certain that the British and French are agreed that there is a point at which the Czechs need concede no more, a point at which the Czechs are entitled to fight, and to be supported, it is not yet clear where that point is. The disposition of the British would be to ask the Czechs to give up more than the French would like to ask them to give up. If it were not for the entente, this might still divide them. But with the entente they are agreed that they will agree.

Moreover, with the entente, that is to say, with the agreement to stand together, and, if necessary, to fight together, the possibility of finding a temporary adjustment in Czechoslovakia is greatly improved. If anything can make Hitler conciliatory for a while, this will do it. For there is no doubt that the Franco-British alliance is the most imposing thing in Europe, and no one could possibly doubt that it is very much stronger than the German-Italian combination.

Entente Attracts Smaller Countries.

THE UNION of the French and the British is not merely the union of the two greatest European empires. It is that. But it is more than that. The union is bound to attract to itself, with a force like that of gravity, many other nations in Europe. Poland, Rumania, Jugoslavia, and perhaps even Hungary, have one paramount interest, to be on the side of and in the good graces of the stronger combination. Until recently they had every reason to think that Hitler was invincible and irresistible and that the allies were demoralized. So they moved into his camp. The existence of a stronger combination in the west means that they must get back on to the fence so as to be ready to jump to the winning side.

And then there is Russia, about which little is said, because little that can be relied upon is known. But this much is clear enough, that the Russian army counts for something and that Russian resources, if the Germans got hold of them, might count for very much, and, though not many people in the west like the moral implications of a combination with Russia, the general feeling is that it is better to have Russia as an ally than as an enemy.

We are passing through dangerous days, and it would be foolish optimism to think that the crisis is past and that war is definitely averted for this season. But the prospects are better because the nations that oppose war are stronger than they were, and bcause they are no longer frightened.

Detective Leslie, Of Scotland Yard, G-Man Graduate

England's Scotland Yard, celebrated in the mystery novels, has sent over one of its men to learn about the methods of America's G-men.

He is Detective Inspector Henry Arthur Leslie, of London, who today will be among the 36 officers who will be graduated from the FBI National Police Academy. The graduation exercises will be held at 10 a. m. in the great hall of the Department of Justice Building.

Associate Justice Harold M. Stephens, of the United States Court of Appeals, will make the principal speech. The diplomas will be handed out by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings. Others who will speak are J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investgiation; Frank L. Matteson, chief investigator of the Missoula, Mont., police department and president of the graduating class, and Lieut. Daniel A. Morgenthau Plans Talk With Lebrun, Other Frenchmen

Paris, July 22 (U.P.).—Henry Morgenthau, jr., United States Secretary of the Treasury, arriving in France tomorrow ostensibly for a vacation, will confer with high cabinet members and government officials.

Morgenthau and his wife will visit President and Mrs. Albert Lebrun at Elysee Palace Sunday morning and dine with Raymond Patenotre, minister of national economy and Mme. Patenotre that evening.

Paul Marchandeau, French minister of finance, will confer with Morgenthau Monday, before a finance ministry luncheon. On Tuesday Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet and Morgenthau will confer.

French observers do not believe Morgenthau is here to negotiate any specific agreements.

The conversations are expected to center around operation of the tri-partite monetary agreement, and trade questions.

Peacemaking

By Barnet Nover

Lesson Of The Chaco.

WHEN THE TREATY of peace terminating the dispute over the Chaco was signed at Buenos Aires on Thursday, a holiday was declared in the Argentine capital. All business was suspended; flags were flown from windows and balconies and 80,000 school children gathered in the Plaza de Mayo to greet the good news with song.

The rejoicing was not limited to the Argentine. In Washington the governing board of the Pan American Union, with Secretary Hull presiding, held a special meeting to felicitate Bolivia and Paraguay and to acclaim this "striking triumph of the principle of friendly settlement of international disputes," to use Mr. Hull's words. The Chilean press exhausted the vocabulary of enthusiasm. And in Rio de Janeiro the boom of cannon heralded the successful conclusion of three years of strenuous labors by eight American nations.

THIS REJOICING is justified. For years the Chaco dispute has poisoned the atmosphere of the Americas. Other disputes between nations of this hemisphere—the Colombian-Peruvian clash over Leticia, the Peruvian-Ecuadorian boundary disagreement, the Dominican-Haitian flare-up over the massacre of Haitians on Dominican soil—had proved themselves susceptible to mediatory efforts. The Chaco problem remained. And only now have Bolivia and Paraguay made peace.

Whether that peace favors Bolivia or Paraguay depends on the point of view. A good part of the disputed territory is allocated to Paraguay. With this arrangement Bolivia is openly dissatisfied and this dissatisfaction may be increased after the mediators have drawn the definitive boundary line which is to be "somewhere between the line of the Peace Conference presented May 27, 1938, and the line of the Paraguayan counterproposal presented . . . June 24, 1938."

The important thing, however, is that peace has been made. Important not only for Bolivia and Paraguay, brought to the point of bankruptcy and exhaustion by an extremely bloody war, but also for the other American nations, who, with the spectacle of current events in Europe and the Far East before them, are more determined than ever to keep war out of this hemisphere.

• • • •

UNDOUBTEDLY it was this pressure from all of the immediate neighbors of Bolivia and Paraguay plus the United States which ultimately led to the peace settlement. Yet the surprising thing is that it took so long before this pressure proved effective. The claimants to the Chaco had been under pressure for many years first not to go to war, then to conclude an armistice, and latterly to make peace.

The two nations did go to war in 1932 and for three years despite urgent pleas from other American nations they continued that war. And it took another three years before the present settlement was made.

• • • •

IT IS AN interesting commentary on the situation which the world faces today. For in the case of the Bolivian-Paraguayan dispute once the actual fighting had been brought to an end the odds were overwhelmingly against a renewal of hostilities and in favor of a speedy peace.

Both Bolivia and Paraguay are small, poor and backward states. They are therefore more susceptible to pressure from without than are large and powerful nations. Moreover, both of the erstwhile combatants had exhausted themselves in the fighting. And there was the important fact that, as a result of the Buenos Aires conference, the "good neighbor" policy and other favorable developments in this hemisphere, the co-operative spirit in this hemisphere was more active than ever.

Yet the Chaco problem resisted the mediatory efforts of six powers, including the United States, for three years.

Under the circumstances, therefore, it is not surprising that peacemaking efforts in other parts of the world only rarely meet with the hoped-for success.

BUT THERE IS another moral to the Chaco peace settlement. People sometimes talk of collective security as if it were an utterly unrealizable ideal. They interpret it as an absolute—the collective action of all the peaceful nations of mankind on behalf of peace. Such unity of purpose and action may be far-off in our day. But collective action nonetheless remains a fact to be reckoned with in our world despite the breakdown of the League and the rise of the aggressors.

Sometimes, as in the case of the Anglo-French alliance signalized this week by the visit of the British royal pair to Paris, it involves but two nations. Sometimes, as in the instance of the Chaco dispute, peace has behind it the pressure of an entire hemisphere. But no nation depends on itself alone to stay out of war. The greater the threat the more each nation seeks to create a collectivity of power with which to persuade the enemy to keep the peace or intimidate and, if necessary, to overwhelm him.

To be sure, threat of forcible action was applied neither to Bolivia nor to Paraguay; the only apparent pressure was that of diplomacy backed up by public opinion. But, then, in this instance, that was enough, given time and patience.

A Spiritual Revival

By Bruce Barton

Reflections Of A "Freshman."

I WAS SURPRISED to discover how little difference there is between Republicans and Democrats. Each party includes within its own ranks men of different economic faiths—radicals and conservatives. Seldom does an important vote divide the House along purely party lines; nearly every crucial vote cuts right across. The problems of today are not political, but economic.

As to the courage of Congressmen, they are about as brave on the average and about as cowardly as men in any other walk of life. Certainly 95 per cent of the members of Congress want to do what is best for the people of the United States. Given a reasonable chance for free play, they will make the right decisions. The trouble is not with them, but with the people back home.

• • • •

THE AMERICAN voters have formed the habit of judging a Representative not by what he can give to the Nation, but by what he can get out of the public Treasury for his own district. In their hearts, Congressmen hate this, but the voters insist. They organize themselves into minority pressure groups and enforce their demands with the threat of defeat at the polls.

The cure for the faults of Congress may be, in part, better Congressmen—though I am frank to say I like them and have a genuine respect for them just as they are. But the deeper and only permanent cure is a change of heart in the American people, a spiritual revival which will give us the same sort of patriotism we had during the World War, when we forgot all about getting from the Government and asked ourselves only "What can I give?"

(Redbook Magazine.)

A Hint For Burglars

How big a job it would be to steal the silver the Government is to store in its new vault at West Point is illustrated by the contract made with a New York trucking firm to transfer the metal from New York to its new depository.

The silver amounts to $1,290,000,000 worth. Whether that means the monetary value of the silver coined into dollars or its value at the prices the Government paid for it we do not know. But it makes little difference. At the monetary value we get the least weight of silver. On that basis the metal would weigh 33,030 tons avoirdupois. Quite a heft for a thief to run with!

It is calculated that the contractor's job will take five trips a week for nearly ten months. At that each trip means a caravan of trucks, for each day he will have to transport about 165 tons in order to get through in ten months.

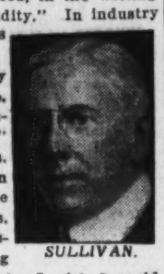
These calculations are recommended to anyone who has a thought of prying open the West Point vault some dark night and making away with Uncle Sam's silver.

(San Francisco Chronicle.)

Mark Sullivan

Commentator Hails Wallace As Writer But Asks If Secretary Appreciates Business Effect Of Reduction Programs.

AS ONE WRITER to another, I take off my hat to Uncle Henry Wallace. By one standard, Uncle Henry is the top writer in the country. The standard in which he excels is called, in the writing fraternity, "productivity" or "fertility" or "fecundity." In industry it is called "output." In the printing craft it is called "wordage."



SULLIVAN.

It is with respect to wordage, quantity, that I pay tribute to Brother Wallace—I refrain, at this time, from saying anything about the quality of the Secretary's output. As a mass producer he is "tops." He may believe in reduced acreage for farmers, but I don't expect to see him put any quotas on paper or ink. Since he came into office in 1933 he has produced a larger number of books, booklets, pamphlets and magazine articles than any professional writer of my acquaintance—to say nothing of his speeches. I make the comparison off-hand. I wish I could speak with statistical exactness, for I think the figures would sustain the comparison. Possibly some of that army of statisticians whom Mr. Wallace keeps in the Department of Agriculture would be kind enough to supply me with the number of printed words the Secretary has put out and the number of speeches he has made since March 4, 1933. It would be an interesting statistic.

And Mr. Wallace has exceeded many professional writers, even though writing is all that professional writers do. Mr. Wallace, between whiles, conducts a Government department that has almost as many employes as the Army and more than the Navy. At least, Mr. Wallace is supposed to run the Department of Agriculture. But I imagine it is really run by the staff of bureaucrats and theocrats, including some whom I suspect Al Smith would ungraciously call "crackpots." Mr. Wallace is just the titular head. The law gives him the authority and so things must be done in his name.

Department Publicity Gives Wallace All Credit.

I OBSERVE a recent handout of the department begins thus:

"The Agriculture Adjustment Administration announced today that Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace has approved regulations . . ."

"Approving" is, I imagine, Mr. Wallace's chief function in the department. It's someone else who really makes the regulations.

But I was talking about Mr. Wallace as a writer. For that function he is well equipped; he has emotion, imagination—lots of the latter. A small detail of his recent output is this, which I find quoted in an article supporting the argument that machinery creates unemployment:

" . . . More than 3,300 mechanical cornpickers have been sold in Iowa during the last two years . . . Since each picker replaces approximately three hand pickers, it is estimated that between 15,000 and 20,000 agricultural laborers have been thrown out of work . . . in Iowa."

That's a sad tale, mates. Twenty thousand corn pickers out of jobs. I weep—though I can remember when I would not have wept if somebody had taken me out of the job of picking and husking with bare fingers on a bleak November day.

But if sad tales are the program, I can tell a sadder one than Mr. Wallace's. It happened some 40 years ago. I was a lad, mates, but I saw much of it with my own eyes. Many of the poor fellows who bit the dust were friends of mine. Ed Hickman, the livery stable keeper, and the driver of the village hack, and the man who drove the big percherons hitched to the beer wagon, and likewise the blacksmith and the harness maker. And tens of thousands I didn't know—the wagon makers, the horse breeders, the teamsters—all thrown out of jobs.

Who did the dastardly deed I don't rightly know, mates. Some said a German named Otto did it—he invented a thing called an internal combustion engine. Some said a fellow in Kokomo, Ind., named Haynes did it. Some put the blame on Henry Ford—though he came later.

Printing Improvements Also Affected Employment.

AND I KNOW another sad tale. A fellow named Mergenthaler invented a mechanical typesetter. Ah, mates, if you had seen the hand compositors thrown out of jobs. And before that there was another sad tale. A German named Gutenberg—those Germans were guilty of atrocities before the Great War—invented a printing press. And all the old fellows who supported themselves copying manuscripts by hand were thrown on relief—if there was relief in those days.

Seriously, Mr. Wallace, you are an educated man in a position of responsibility and leadership. Are you trying to make the people believe that invention destroys jobs? Do you deny that actually invention creates jobs? Won't you turn your statisticians on just one computation and give me the result? How many new jobs were created by the invention of the automobile? How many persons were engaged in manufacturing carriages in 1894—and how many in making automobiles today? What is the comparison on road building and road repair?

Do you really believe what is implied in your statement about the mechanical corn-picker? Or are you trying to support the New Deal thesis that unemployment is not their fault but the fault of something else? Better look out, Mr. Wallace, you'll lose your reputation for sincerity. You're a better man than most of them and you ought not to be helping them in their search for alibis.

Maybe you are subconsciously influenced by what you are doing yourself. Are you obscurely trying to justify your own policy of artificial scarcity? You, Mr. Wallace, are the real job-killer in the United States. When you limit the quantity of cotton raised, you by that act limit the number of jobs ginning cotton, spinning it, weaving it, carrying cotton and cotton goods on freight trains. You are not only the Herod of the little pigs, you are the Attila of industry, the scourge of trade.

Roosevelt Nears Galapagos Isles

Aboard U. S. S. Houston, En Route to Panama, July 22 (A.P.).—Voluminous Government reports occupied the attention of President Roosevelt today as he cruised toward the tropical Galapagos Islands, land of nudist exiles and a weird death mystery of several years ago, involving associates of a German baroness.

The Houston was due Sunday afternoon for a week's visit among the volcanic islands, more than 500 miles west of Ecuador, to which they belong.

The Houston sped through calm seas and ideal weather at 22 knots today on the 1,300-mile course between Clipperton Island, off Mexico, and the Galapagos.

Except for the destroyer McDougal, the Houston's convoy, not a ship or scarcely a sign of civilization has been sighted since the Presidential party left San Lucas Tuesday.

Rain to Slacken For the Week-End

Showers which have poured 2.33 inches of rain on the city since Sunday will slacken but continue over the week-end, the Weather Bureau predicted last night. Little change in temperature, which reached a high of 85 degrees at about 4 p. m. yesterday, was foreseen. Despite the rains, the city is .43 inch below normal in precipitation for the month.

Throughout the East, extensive damage to crops, roads and bridges was reported as rainy weather entered its third week. Damage to Connecticut's tobacco crop was estimated at $1,000,000; Massachusetts reported $500,000 crop damage; New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Long Island reported extensive damage to produce and New York's $3,000,000 waterworks project at Laclawack was menaced by flooded Rondout Creek.

Fire Plug First Wears Chief's New Uniform

St. Louis, July 22 (U.P.).—Chief of Police John H. Glassco's missing uniform was found today—draped over a fire hydrant on a downtown street. Glassco said he ordered a new summer uniform some time ago, but it never had been delivered. He said it must have been stolen from the delivery truck by a thief who found the police chief's uniform "too hot to handle."

Adams Gets Place On Colorado Ballot

Colorado Springs, Colo., July 22 (A.P.).—United States Senator Adams today was approved for renomination at the September primaries, and his name ordered placed on the ballot, at the State Democratic convention. His opponent, Justice Benjamin C. Hilliard, failed to get a place on the ballot but may do so later by petition.

The convention vote was: Adams, 1,285; Hilliard, 218. Hilliard fell 84 votes short of the 302 necessary for designation.

Gov. Teller Ammons, candidate to succeed himself, received unanimous designation.

West Will Retain 2-Cent Rail Fare

Chicago, July 22 (A.P.).—Officials of the major Western railroads decided today not to fall in line with the Eastern roads by increasing passenger rates, said Harry G. Taylor, chairman of the Western Association of Railway Executives.

Coach fares in the East recently were hiked from 2 cents a mile to 2.25 cents on authorization of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The Western coach rates of 2 cents a mile were adopted in 1933, independently of the commission.

Large Crowd Attends St. Aloysius Crab Feast

Parishioners of St. Aloysius Church, North Capitol and I streets, were given an opportunity last night to eat all the crab they could hold and apparently most of them took advantage of it. The feast was held in the church recreation hall because of rain.

The committee on arrangements included Al Perruso, Maurice O'Connell, Leo Fogarty, Robert Clancy, Bernard Daniel and Aloysius Gleason.

Personal Items.

Perhaps you know some of these people, will participate in some of the things they plan, or will be interested:

We never saw a man more inwardly distressed at leaving familiar surroundings than was Capt. George Johnson, of the Smithsonian guard, upon his retirement this week. To be sure, he was laughing as they shook his hand, but all the while he was staring terribly hard at the familiar objects of the museum. "I've been here 42 nearly 43, years and after that you see the place as home." It isn't so pleasant to be around when people are saying the end, even though they laugh at the end.

The ever popular Agriculture Chorus goes on an outing this afternoon and at 8 in the evening will present a program for the Community Center of Washington Grove, Md. They will sing the Toreador song, "The Flower Girl" and a lot of things that made the girls wistful in the nineties . . . And today is the annual outing of the Sigma Nu Phi, international legal fraternity, down at Breezy Point Beach. Warren J. Moore and J. Murray Parker, of the GAO, and Curtis W. Burlin, of the same Federal workshop, are among the arrangers.

The I. D. R. A.'s annual field day and outing will be held at Fort Hunt, Va., near Mount Vernon, on August 27. They will select Miss Interior-1938. The selection this year, as last, will be made by Washington newspapermen, and we ask them not to choose us for a judge because we'll certainly pick Miss Interior-1937 (who is Miss Mary Louise Rogers) as the Miss Interior-1938. It is difficult to see how she can be improved upon.

Harry G. Ritner writes in of a find:

"Recenty I found the last 'blue book' edition which was published in 1921, entitled 'The Official Register of the United States, 1921, Directory.' The preface states: 'The earliest issue of the "Official Register" (then known as the "Officials and Agents") was published in 1816 by the Secretary of State, under authority of a resolution of Congress approved April 27 of that year. The Secretary of State continued to issue the "Register" biennially until 1861, when, by act of Congress, approved March 2, the supervision of its publication was transferred to the Department of the Interior.

"The Register of 1861 and each succeeding edition up to and including that of 1905 were issued by the Secretary of the Interior. The law governing the publication of the Official Register, which had been amended from time to time, was revived in 1895 and was further amended in 1902, 1904 and 1913. In 1906 the duty of publishing the Register was transferred by act of Congress to the Director of Census. The salaries listed indicate beyond doubt that the classification act of 1924 boosted salaries very considerably, especially for those holding principal supervisory positions."

Shirley Temple Is at Her Best In Palace Film

'Litlte Miss Broadway' Also Enlists Cast of Adult Stars.

"LITTLE MISS BROADWAY." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a screen play by Harry Tugend and Jack Yellen, starring Shirley Temple, with George Murphy, Jimmy Durante, Phyllis Brooks, Edna Mae Oliver, George Barbier, Edward Ellis, Jane Darwell, El Brendel, Donald Meek, Patricia Wilder, Claude Gillingwater, George and Olive Brasno, the Brian Sisters, the Brewster Twins, Clarie DuBrey, Robert Gleckler, Eddie Collins, Syd Saylor, Jerry Colonna, Heinie Conklin and Ben Weldon. Directed by Irving Cummings. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At Loew's Palace Theater.

Even an orphanage seems a happy place if Shirley Temple is around singing "Be Optimistic."

In "Little Miss Broadway," America's tiny best boxoffice bet has another tailored-to-order part. Temple admirers greeted the picture with a burst of applause yesterday.

There's something reminiscent of "Little Miss Marker," ace Temple picture, in "Little Miss Broadway." Again she is a little waif, again she is adopted by persons of golden hearts but uncertain background, again she is the little goddess from the machine who wrangles her way out of all difficulties.

From the orphanage Shirley is adopted by Pop Shea (Edward Ellis), friend of her parents and unprosperous proprietor of a theatrical hotel. All is rosy until the hotel's owner, cranky Miss Wendling (Edna Mae Oliver), gets riled at swing band rehearsals, demands her back rent or else, and finally caps her meanness by simultaneously starting eviction proceedings and an action returning Shirley to the orphanage on the ground that her surroundings are improper.

A Show in Court.

The wind-up of the tangle comes in the courtroom when Shirley bursts in (she's run away from the orphanage) and persuades the judge to let her theatrical friends put on a show in the court as evidence of their ability to make money. Here comes one of the most novel and amusing of recent picture sequences, with such stars as George Murphy and Jimmy Durante, as well as Shirley, panicking the judge. And about the cutest flash of the picture is that of Shirley strutting cockily into court carrying a brief case.

The little girl star is surrounded by a bomb-proof cast of some of Hollywood's finest character actors and actresses, as well as that smart dancer, George Murphy (who will give Astaire a run for his money, if anyone can) and Pretty Phyllis Brooks in the necessary love interest roles.

On the comedy side are Jimmy Durante, Edna Mae Oliver and El Brendel, all of whom have been featured as stars. Add on those equally good character people, Donald Meek, George Barbier, Edward Ellis and Jane Darwell,, and you inevitably have so much good acting by seasoned troupers that impregnable support of small Shirley is assured.

Shirley is still Shirley—that quaint and lovely little tyke who has ensnared the world's heart. But she is growing up enough to be amusingly coquettish, flirting comically with George Murphy in their dance numbers, being outright the siren as she persuades a newsboy with a bicycle to let her ride with him and loan her a nickel. The name of this newsboy was unknown to us, but he is one of the most genuine little boys who has popped up on the screen and, praise be, his good looks are on the tough side. While not much significance can be attached to most of Shirley's orphanage comrades, there is one little blonde girl, plumpish, soft, lovable—supposed to be Shirley's best friend—who should be seen more in pictures.

Shirley Growing Younger.

Outside of the opening "Be Optimistic" number, most of Shirley's songs are pretty sentimental and give her a chance to be quite the little Bernhardt; in fact, to shed a tear or two as she warbles at her nearest and dearest one. If anything, too, La Temple looks younger, more chubby, than in her last picture. Far be it from us to judge if this is because she is playing with taller people.

A historical short unveils the riddling story of the mysterious Miss Carroll who claimed to have advised President Lincoln of the strategy of the Tennessee campaign that turned the tide of the Civil War. Excellent, too, is "The Magician's Daughter," but not so much because of the daughter as the 10-year-old son of the magician, a li'l rascal who's always doing tricks out of turn and being sent away from the table by his frenzied family.

Columbia

"Lord Jeff," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's respectful tribute to the value of the Barnardo Training Home in England, yesterday returned to the F street screen at Loew's Columbia Theater to spread its inspirational message and engrossing entertainment over another week.

This is the celluloid story of the discipline of British youth and their training for various occupations—the high seas, as members of the merchant marine, in this instance—in which the principal juvenile roles are handsomely played by Freddie Bartholomew, Mickey Rooney and Little Terry Kilburn, and their elders by Charles Coburn, Herbert Mundin and Emma Dunn. The powers of social evil in the picture are portrayed by Gale Sondergaard and Peter Lawford, cast as jewel thieves, whose predatory activities result in Master Jeffrey Braemer's "sentence" to the Barnardo Home.

There is sane treatment of the problem of juvenile delinquency as well as excitement and high drama in this film. The action and the interest center in the behavior of the lads who so thickly people all but the opening scenes. Mickey Rooney, in this subject, is the youthful symbol of virtue, and Freddie Bartholomew the embodiment of every reprehensible boyhood trait, just as he was in "Captains Courageous" until he came under the corrective influence of Manuel, the Portugese sailor, impersonated so skillfully by Spencer Tracy. Similarly helpful examples are thrown about him in "Lord Jeff" by Charles Coburn, the humorous Mr. Mundin and the kindly Emma Dunn.

As an added attraction—and for the last time—the final chapter of "The Lone Ranger" also is included in the bill.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Dude Ranch Travesty Has Able Singing Cast; 'Ice Follies.'

"COWBOY FROM BROOKLYN." Warner Brothers picturization of the play, "Howdy, Stranger," by Robert Sloane and Louis Pelletier, jr., adapted to the screen by Earl Baldwin, featuring Dick Powell, Pat O'Brien and Priscilla Lane, with Dick Foran, Ann Sheridan, Johnnie Davis, Ronald Reagan, Emma Dunn, Granville Bates, James Stephenson, Hobart Cavanaugh, Elisabeth Risdon, May Boley, Harry Barris, Candy Candido, Donald Briggs, William Davidson and Mary Field. Directed by Lloyd Bacon. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

Here is a "natural" for popular enjoyment at this silly season of the year.

"Cowboy from Brooklyn" is gaited approximately to a streak of lightning. It rushes along through comedy sequences, songs, hokum, travesty, rodeo thrills and romance with never a serious thought or a serious purpose. It is impossible to take this frivolous frolic seriously. Even the cast found that out and, under the spirited direction of Lloyd Bacon, romped through their parts as if they themselves were having the time of their lives. Maybe they were, for this is "dude ranch" stuff, transported finally to Broadway, and "dude ranches" are supposed to be places to have fun. That should be amended to the Earle Theater this week.

BELL.

There might be a shadow of the skeleton of "Kentucky Moonshine" in the framework of this sizzling subject, but only a shadow, and only that because a young Brooklyn crooner has to go 'way out to Cody, Wyo., to come back home and make a hit on the radio as a bona-fide cowboy vocalist. His experiences in the process are weird and wonderful to behold—especially since he was born with an animal phobia that makes him equally terror-stricken at sight of a squirrel or a raging bull. He has a fine time on the ranch!

Hypnotist to Rescue.

He also has a fine time in New York, when they tell him he will have to bulldog a steer at the rodeo in Madison Square Garden to prove his identity and belie the charge that he is an impostor, made over the air by a jealous rival, who has just been "gonged" during a burlesque of one of Maj. Bowes' amateur broadcasts. It requires the services of a hypnotist to meet this emergency. And does he meet it! He meets it so completely that he mesmerizes practically the entire visiting party from the West as well as the "cowboy's" parents from Flatbush.

And that's the way it goes—just one continuous spasm of laughter that almost blew the roof off of the Earle yesterday afternoon.

In the principal roles, Dick Powell, Pat O'Brien and Priscilla Lane, aided and abetted by Dick Foran, Johnnie Davis, Ann Sheridan and the others named in the small-type paragraph preceding these comments, keep up a swift and ridiculous pace. They have the advantage of a glib and amusing transcript for the screen, by Earl Baldwin, of Robert Sloane and Louis Pelletier's play of "Howdy, Stranger." The "smartcracking" dialogue has something the savor of the wit that George Marion, jr., was accustomed to contribute to the printed subtitles in the old days of the silent movies. Pat O'Brien, particularly, reads his speeches with the staccato precision of a gatling gun in action. Priscilla Lane assumes a quaint "Western" dialect and does it extremely well, and Dick Powell, as the frightened fake, is better than he has been in months.

Thaw Hits "Ice Follies."

The "Lake Placid Ice Follies," on the stage, slowed things down a bit after the cyclonic speed of the screen feature, owing to a real-ice skating surface that could not quite withstand Washington's sultry climate. It was as rough as a gravel road and puddled with water. Nevertheless, there was sufficient evidence of skill on the part of the principals in the production to indicate a thrilling interval of novel "winter" sport, once the temperature of the rink is lowered to a surer freezing point.

Eric Wait is a comedy skating star of the first water—"water" was right yesterday—and expertness on the blades also is revealed by Roberts and Farley, May Judels, Bobbie Dorree, Claire Simone, Martha Carter, DeLories Ziegfeld and Bobby Duffy, even under obvious handicaps. The "16 Lake Placid Ladies" also add to the picturesqueness of a unique diversion.

Also on the stage bill are the Trado Twins, with their familiar comedy and "double-decked" finale, and Wally and Ver-Dyn Stapleton, dancers who are adept tapsters.

One of the most amusing of the "Merrie Melodie" cartoon comedies in color, "Cinderella Meets a Fella;" a "Popular Science" release and the Paramount News, with a new supplementary release depicting European events that occurred only a day or two ago—the British King and Queen in Paris, the "Pick-a-Back" airplane, etc.—add to the variety of a bill that is rich in elements of unusual entertainment and scored a smash hit with the opening day crowds.

Metropolitan

"THE COUNT OF MONTE CRISTO." Reliance Pictures picturization for United Artists release of the novel by Dumas, adapted to the screen by Philip Dunne, Dan Totheroh and Rowland V. Lee, featuring Robert Donat and Elissa Landi, with Louis Calhern, Sydney Blackmer, Raymond Walburn, the late O. P. Heggie, Irene Hervey, Georgia Caine, Walter Walker, Lawrence Grant, Luis Alberni, Juliette Compton, Clarence Wilson, Ferdinand Munier, Holmes Herbert, William Farnum, Mitchell Lewis, Clarence Muse, Lionel Belmore, Wilfred Lucas, Tom Ricketts, Edward Keane and scores more. Directed by Rowland V. Lee. A revival, reviewed Friday afternoon by Dorothea Lewis.

Having enjoyed "Top Hat," "Man's Castle" and now "Count of Monte Cristo," we're almost tempted to say that the old ones are the best. Almost, but not quite, because we realize that we are seeing only the best of the old ones. At any rate we have a noisy "bravo" for this reissuing idea—the best of the old ones are excellent, and this is one of the best of the best.

If we had to classify it, we'd probably call "Monte Cristo" an intellectual adventure picture. There is exciting action in its early reels, but the tensest and most tingling moments come past its midway point in Monte Cristo's most articulate scenes—dramatic dialogue and situations which seem to move faster than any mere action. Of course, Robert Donat has a lot to do with this movement and punch.

You know the story as well as we do. Edmond Dantes, young sea captain of France in the troubled years between Napoleon's two exiles, newly betrothed and newly made master of his own ship, is suddenly thrown into prison as a political prisoner without hope of trial or pardon. Three men, Danglars, de Villefort and Mondego, saving their own necks and planning their bright futures, send him there, though they know he is innocent, and there Dantes dies to the world. When he finally escapes and returns for his revenge and justice, he has gained wisdom and wealth from a fellow prisoner, and bitterness and singleness of purpose from his tortured and wasted years. His plans for the futures of his three "friends" differ greatly from theirs.

This is one of the most satisfying of stories. Dantes hates but three men and when he is ready to be revenged upon them, there they are, all three of them in fine high places ready to be tumbled a long, long way down to a beautiful crash, and there also waiting are friends and his sweetheart and a happy ending. Satisfying, very. Of course, he had had 20 pretty bad prison years.

The picture, its excellent cast notwithstanding, is all Donat. He it is, playing Dantes-Monte Cristo with brilliance and incisiveness and his own particularly clipped clipped-speech, who gives a fine and exciting picture most of its excitement and finesse, and a real depth of feeling and sincerety which makes it definitely exhiliarating to share in his revenge. His portrait is very different from that of James O'Neill—remember that stance on the rock, arms wide to the skies, and the exultant cry, "The world is mine!" and then notice Donat's simple, quiet version—but it is still in the best of the romantic tradition, modern style.

Of the supporting cast, we like best the late beloved O. P. Heggie, Louis Calhern, Raymond Walburn, Luis Alberni and Douglas Walton. Elissa Landi is lovely, but Sidney Blackmer seems flat-voiced and uninspired.

An unusual and entertaining newsreel is on view this week. It includes the films flown here on the much publicized Pick-a-Back plane, and can boast a fine Irish brogue to introduce the fine Irish-American grin of that braw lad, Gorrigan, and an excited and authentic French accent to describe the English rulers' visit to France. There is also a Looney Tune cartoon comedy to complete the bill.

Rink at Earle Is New Wrinkle

one of the featured fancy skaters in the "Lake Placid Ice Follies," providing this week's stage entertainment at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. Real ice is used by this act, instead of the customary glassy chemical composition, for a slightly mushy skating surface that "puddled" a little yesterday.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., July 22.—Bing Crosby is the despair of photographers and press but the delight of musicians. He didn't have time to pose for an impressive layout of pictures for a national magazine. He was too busy being snapped with the boys in the band, because it might help them.

HEDDA HOPPER

He is the funniest guy to talk to I've ever met. He says, "Aw, who wants to know anything about me?" You'd have paid anything to see his radio rehearsals with Bob Hope, Bob Burns, He'll work out parodies for hours—going into barber shop chords—to amuse the gang. When he looked at his script last week, he said. "Hm . . . so corny I could drink it and it would knock me out." Bing's the only man I ever knew who could sing as well with a pipe in his mouth as out.

The day after Hedy LaMarr's opening in "Algiers," I met her at my favorite Farmers' Market. Instead of sitting home reading her press notices, she was doing the daily chores. I introduced her to my vegetable man who on his day off goes back to his real job of being a clergyman. My meat man is a world traveler, only has to save up $50 more to be off again—maybe a year, maybe two. When he runs out of cash, he cuts up—steers mostly.

The Stu Erwins, Albertina Rasch, Boris Karloff, Wally Beery, Deanna Durbin, Billie Burke, Isabel Jewell, Una Merkel and Madge Evans all shop there, pushing those little wicker baskets before them. It's fun knowing what each is having for dinner.

Ran into Roland Young, who was off to be X-rayed for practically everything. He's to play opposite an elephant which is supposed to have the mumps, so Ro is preparing for the worst. The name of the picture is "Zenobia's Infidelity." Ro hopes that isn't catching, too. The story was told to him by Dorothy Gish. He read it, passed it on to Hal Roach, who bought it pronto.

Mary Boland had a ticklish scene to do the other day for "Artists and Models in Paris." She balanced herself on top of four tables and reached for the moon. They wanted her stand-in to do it. Mary said, "Nothing doing—She's got a three months old baby. And all I've got is a dog, canary and frogs."

Mike Whalen is known as the matchmaker's delight. Numbered among his former girl friends are: Katharine DeMille, Leah Raye, Lynn Barri, also June Lang whom he introduced to Vic Orsatti. And Alice Faye to Tony Martin. Mike says if the Angel Gabriel came down and begged, he wouldn't introduce him to Ilona Massey.

Mary Ellis, who wasn't very successful in pictures, has taken on, in England, a fourth bridegroom, Jock Stuart-Roberts. She was once the wife of Eddie Knopf, head of the story department at Metro, who is happily married and the father of three children.

Inez Courteney has had a strange accident. She didn't think it funny. Sat on the wrong end of a crochet needle.

And our great athlete, Glen Morris, joined some of the crew in a basketball game and knocked himself out for 45 minutes.

Shirley Ross started for Canada—got as far as Carmel and was halted by one of those smart, smocked painters in the middle of the road doing a landscape. Don't know whether it was the smock, artist or painting that stopped her. She got no farther than Carmel—and returned with a painting.

I just received a letter from Frances Marion, mailed in Copenhagen. She says, "While crossing the Baltic Sea in a storm, the little boat rode on everything but its bottom. Wasn't sick but felt like a dog after he'd eaten a dozen cream puffs."

Beery and Morgan Head Cast in Frank Play; Ace Stage Bill.

"PORT OF SEVEN SEAS." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the play, "Fanny," by Marcel Pagnol, adapted to the screen by Preston Sturges, starring Wallace Beery, with Frank Morgan, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Beal, Jessie Ralph, Cora Witherspoon, Etienne Girardot and E. Allyn Warren. Directed by James Whale. Previewed Tuesday, July 19. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

An American cast of players—and one of distinguished ability—here undertakes to lend verisimilitude to a screen play of distinctly European content and argument with something a little less than complete success.

"Port of Seven Seas" reflects a Continental point of view in its philosophy of life and marriage. Its pivotal characters are Cesar, a barkeeper on the Marseilles waterfront; his son, Marius; an ingenuous young sidewalk oyster vendor, whom Marius loves, and Panisse, a millionaire sailmaker, all of whom live in a close little commercial community of the quays. On the eve of what should have been their marriage, Marius sails away on a three-year sea trip, leaving Madelon the unhappy prospective mother of an unborn child. Panisse long has coveted the love of the girl and, learning of Marius unceremonious departure without even saying good-by, approaches her mother with a renewal of his proposal of marriage.

Having refused him times without number before, Madelon, in a moment of desperation, explains to Panisse the reason she can not, in justice to him, accept the honor and the riches he wishes to bestow upon her. Panisse, however, is of a different view. Fatherless into the elderly years of his widower life, he is overjoyed at the opportunity to become a father to Marius' child when it is born. Cesar, stubborn in his insistence that Madelon already virtually is his daughter-in-law, will have none of this arrangement until its economic benefits are made clear to him and a promise has been given that the child shall be named after him and Marius and he shall be godfather.

An Argumentative Climax.

This is the plan that has been followed, when Marius returns unexpectedly from the sea. He demands both his "wife" and his child. There ensues a pseudo-philosophical argument among all concerned as to the relative claims of both Panisse and Marius to the fatherhood of the child. It is Cesar who finally convinces his son that Panisse's is the greater claim. He has given the baby a name, riches, respectability and love; Marius has given it only life. Life is cheap; love is a priceless heritage.

Such is the frank and minutely particularized thesis of the play. It is a wordy play—a conversation piece, rather than a drama that achieves its purpose through situations and action. Some of the scenes seem unnecessarily long and verbose. At other times, there are moments of some emotional strength, considerable humor and occasional thrill. In every visual aspect, "Port of Seven Seas" is as foreign as its unconventional and explicit consideration of an intimate and a delicate topic.

Wallace Beery and Frank Morgan, as Cesar and Panisse, respectively, carry the major burden of the most vital of the scenes, with Maureen O'Sullivan, in the role of Madelon, sharing with them the climacteric episodes and, of course, affording the work its entire motivation. She is always a little more convincing than either Beery or Morgan, in their roles of unaccustomed garrulity. John Beal, as Marius, appears only in the beginning and at the end of the picture and seemed to this observer to permit the entire spirit of his character to evade him while he concentrated merely on its elocution.

Etienne Girardot, Jessie Ralph, Cora Witherspoon and E. Allyn Warren contribute adequately to the film's attempt to create an impression of Gallic liberality in circumstances of extreme emergency.

Stage Bill of Hits.

The stage bill at the Capitol this week affords considerably more enlivenment than the screen feature. Paul Haakon, the "extra added attraction," and Little Jackie Heller, "the mighty mite of song," who is headlining, both effectually "stopped the show"—Haakon with his infinitely graceful and intricate choreography; Jackie with an especially effective selection of popular songs and ballads. Haakon's dancing honors are shared by Eunice Healey, a ballet and ballet-tap artiste, whose like has not before been seen on a local stage.

Frank Conville and a blonde partner—was her name Sunny Dale?—came in for their vigorous round of applause, too, in a nonsensical potpourri of music and clowning, and Wilba Novak, reputedly on her way to Hollywood, almost set the stage on fire with her torrid song numbers and bandleading in the Ina Ray Hutton manner. The "12 Janette Hackett Delovelies" added picturesque background in a variety of routines, with Phil Lampkin serving in the dual capacity of orchestra conductor and master of ceremonies.

An exceptionally interesting issue on the Fox Movietone News is the remaining auxiliary of a feature picture which, at least, is different."

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

By QUENTIN REYNOLDS.

Substituting for Leonard Lyons who is vacationing.

THE LAW OF SUPPLY and demand is as inexorable as death and taxes. It is the primary law of the land, superseding even that sacred cow of the Tory—the Constitution of the United States. It is a natural law written by circumstances and enforced by forces over which man has no control. If too much cotton is grown, no legislation, no constitutional provision can alter the fact. If too many pigs are raised, no amount of artificial ballyhoo for pork can increase the demand for it. To date the only remedy the Government has found (and it is admittedly a stop-gap) is the process of "plowing under."

• • • •

IT IS A DRASTIC REMEDY, but to date no one has found a better one. This naturally brings us to the consideration of the oversupply of writers. The supply of writers far exceeds the demand and there is no reason why writers should receive any consideration which cotton and pigs do not receive. Obviously, the only thing to do is to "plow under" nonessential writers. It is the only sensible way to curtail the enormous amount of writing which flows from a million typewriters today.

• • • •

WHICH TYPE OF WRITER shall be considered superfluous? First of all the writers of great novels must go. All the critics have agreed that Thomas Mann's "Joseph in Egypt" is the greatest novel of the past decade. It is an amazing book, a gigantic work by perhaps the world's finest prose artist. We all agree on that and yet—have you read "Joseph in Egypt?" Of course not. Do you know any one who has? I doubt it. Last Sunday I failed to find the book listed among the 25 best sellers. Obviously, great writers are not needed.

• • • •

SHOULD ENTERTAINING WRITERS molders of light novels and lighter verse be spared? I don't see why. The editorials in the anti-Administration newspapers provide the most sidesplitting entertainment ever offered to the great American public—and at the fairly reasonable price of 2 or 3 cents. No writer of fiction can hope to cope with their genius for sheer Marxian (Groucho Marxian, that is) humor in their attempts to discredit the Administration. Entertaining writers are definitely superfluous as long as those newspapers continue to publish.

• • • •

WITH ONE EXCEPTION, I can think of no type of writing today which is vitally important. There is one writer who must be preserved from the plow. I refer, of course, to the fashion writer. She serves a real purpose. Her job is to make women think that they can be beautiful. Then, she tells them how they can be made beautiful.

• • • •

THE FASHION WRITERS are fully cognizant of the fundamental unattractiveness of their sex. I quote from the facile pen of Miss Lois Long in a recent magazine articles. "Bloomingsdale's has a department for women who tend toward shortness and wideness. They are offering a house coat which boasts of short underarm lines and other tricks that make them hit you in the right places."

• • • •

ELIZABETH HAWES has done a great deal for this country in persuading women to so embellish their natural handicaps as to make them actually assets. I would not swap one Elizabeth Hawes for ten Sinclair Lewises.

• • • •

FASHION WRITERS are the only purposeful writers left. Theirs is the only writing that justifies itself; that serves an end. They have given us an illusion that women are beautiful. We know it to be a treacherous mirage which we see, but their constant insistence upon the beauty of women has acted as a soporific which has lulled our logic to sleep and thankfully astigmatized our sight.

• • • •

Most writers are intellectually dead, anyway, so the plowing under of them will be nothing but a formality. But spare our fashion writers. Please.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Jobless College Gradnate Thinks Marriage Should Be Postponed; Girl Wonders if He Loves Her.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For 18 months I have been going with a young man of 23. We are very much in love and since Christmas have planned to be married. Due to the fact that he was graduating from college in June, we made tentative plans to be married around September 1. Occasionally he remarked that he would have to return home (to Kansas) after graduation, and each time he would ask me please to go with him. At the time, it seemed far away and impossible, but I told him I would marry him whenever he thought best.

• • • •

Time went on and I found myself more in love with him. He talked constantly of marriage and both of us eagerly made plans. The only drawback was his failure to find a suitable job. The one he wanted was given to someone else. The one he could have had he didn't take, thinking to find a better one. He became discouraged; talked again about going home and changed our plans to be married because of "circumstances."

• • • •

Finally I told him I didn't believe he wanted to be married; that he didn't love me or he wouldn't stall so long. But he said he loved me more than ever; that the only reason he changed his mind was because he was thinking of my welfare. I have told him repeatedly that finances should not disturb him so much; that I wasn't marrying for a meal ticket.

• • • •

Last week he told me he had made up his mind that marriage was impossible unless I went home with him; that he knew the job he wanted was there. He said he would have returned home long ago if it were not for my being here. He wrote his mother about me and asked her opinion. He said he talked with close friends and most of them told him to wait a year or two. It seems as if every time he makes up his mind, he meets some kind of disappointment and changes it again.

• • • •

Yesterday he told me that he had definitely made up his mind that we shouldn't be married now but he loves me and hopes to marry me some day. He said he wanted to play fair; that I could have other dates; that I was free to come and go as I choose. Now I ask you—does that sound like a man in love? What do you advise me to do? What should my attitude be? Should I plead with him (it worked once) or tell him to go jump in the lake?

• • • •

I see him on the average of three times a week. He is kind to me, we never quarrel and I know that with much persuasion I could marry him, but I think the desire should come from him. What do you think? How can I keep him from changing his mind so much? I might add that I am in college and have one more year before getting my degree. I feel that time will separate us unless we marry now; that he will probably go home and we will never see each other again. Sincerely, A. D. F.

Wise Young Man.

DEAR A. D. F.: All things considered, I think you have already pressed the young man too hard on the subject of marriage. I think any young man is amply justified in postponing marriage when he has neither the wherewithal to provide a home of sorts for his wife, nor a visible means of support for her. I think it is to this boy's credit—a testimonial to his dogged strength of character and sound common sense—that he has held out against your eager desire to be married, willy-nilly; against your pleadings and feminine blandishments, in view of the fact that he has—in the past, at least—believed himself to be genuinely and deeply in love with you.

• • • •

Your reaction to the situation has been entirely emotional throughout. Your fiance, on the other hand, has been pulled one way by emotion and another way by logic—and for that reason has been in a constant state of indecision. The only thing to do is to act in accordance with the facts—which are these: the young man has no job and no record of professional experience which would qualify him, in the near future, for a position whose emoluments would be sufficient to carrying the load of family expense. Added to this, he is cut off by distance from family, friends and local social influence of a sort which might eventually procure him a toe-hold in the business world, even in the face of the current Nation-wide dearth of occuptional opportunities for college graduates. As for yourself, your education is incomplete and I assume you are not self-supporting, and probably incapable, at this time, of becoming entirely self-supporting. All of which constitutes the strongest sort of logical argument against marriage this year.

• • • •

Furthermore, if either party's devotion to the other is so shallow rooted that it cannot survive one or two years' interval of working and waiting for marriage (and that appears to be your estimate), then it affords no proper foundation for marriage. It means that your current attachment lacks the strength, durability and potentialities for growth so necessary for a lifetime's successful co-operation in marriage. Even supposing you do love each other genuinely today, and did marry without making sane, farsighted provision for financing the undertaking—on a concrete, tangible basis—it is likely your respective nervous and emotional energies would soon be so exhausted by economic pressure that your love would die of attrition, in a few months or a few years.

• • • •

I think you have done more to hinder marriage than to promote it, in keeping the young man here at your side. If you had been really wise, really mentally prepared for the indefatigable, sound and constant planning that is a concomitant of marriage, you would have urged him to return to Kansas the moment it became apparent that he was becoming discouraged in his fruitless job-hunt here. You would have sent him off to seek his fortune nearer home, armed with your blessing, your trust and your happy conviction, eloquently expressed, that he would be sending for you, or coming back for you, in all good time.

• • • •

You would have said, in effect: "I'll take this next year for finishing my schooling and getting my degree, and you take this year for finding that job we need and licking it to a standstill. That ought to keep both of us busier than a hen with 40 chicks. We won't be too unbearably lonely; we won't have time; the year will be gone before we know it, and, of course, we'll write each other every day; and maybe you can even come for the Christmas holidays and we'll get engaged all over again as a sort of anniversary celebration."

• • • •

Since you haven't taken this attitude nor said these things up to now—but instead have made the dubious contribution of alternately clinging to and heckling the young man—it would be something of a miracle if he still continues to regard you as the answer to a modern young man's prayer for an inspiring lifetime companion. However, while there's life there's hope, and therefore, I advise you to reverse your attitude beginning as of today, and start right now making up for lost time.

• • • •

Encourage the young man to make his own decisions. If he can't be trusted to make decisions and see them through to a successful conclusion, he is no safe matrimonial bet, anyway. A woman is a fool to marry a man whom she has to lead by the nose through the mazes of existence; and he is a fool for letting her do it. Make him feel that he is entirely capable of solving any and every problem to the complete satisfaction of both; that his courage, his wisdom, his resourcefulness are more than adequate to the solution of this problem; and that you are content to follow his lead, meanwhile enthusiastically cheering his trail-breaking activities.

• • • •

Send him back to Kansas with no hard feelings; rather, with love and encouragement. If, perchance, he fails to return; if he forgets you eventually; falls in love with and marries someone else, you may know that the feeling you had for each other was too essentially ephemeral—however intense—to warrant marriage; and, also, that you by your own actions this past summer, did much to shorten its life. M. H.

White on Black and Vice Versa for Summer

HERE are two ways of enlivening your wardrobe in midseason. The girl below dons a black crepe dress with a short swing bolero, then gives it a summery touch by means of a white pigskin belt, a white flower, a seed pearl ornament, and white crochet gloves. At right, Bette Davis, movie star, adds a touch of fall to a light dress by means of a dark belt, gloves and hats and carries a plaid wool jacket.

Daring Touches Will Give Zest To Jaded Summer Wardrobe

Color Contrast by Means of Sashes, Belts and Flowers Is Most Effective; Chatelaines and Odd Trinkets Now the Vogue.

HOW to rejuvenate the summer wardrobe is the question of the moment. Dresses and hats that are beginning to "look tired" may take a new lease on life with the addition of a perky little touch of some kind. A bright or vari-colored jacket with matching belt may change the entire character of a white dress—or even a dark linen or silk. A sky-blue handkerchief linen made in the new boxy style is one suggestion, and may be worn over wool or cotton.

Sashes are very popular and can be depended upon to make a dress look different. If you aren't bold enough to try a sash then get a striking new belt. Or some colorful barbaric jewelry may be just the touch you need.

A midsummer vagary that is expected to spread is the chatelaine. This old-time gadget which originally was defined as "a group of chains hanging from a woman's belt to hold her keys, scissors, etc," now has become a very up-to-date ornament and style addicts are searching their attics for heirlooms in this form. Naturally a chatelaine is the only ornament one needs with a dark dress.

Daring color contrast also is a good midsummer idea with which to experiment. Paris is combining lavendar with yellow, emerald green with blue, black with banana yellow, mauve with blue, and trying out almost anything that suits the fancy.

If you want to try a new hat, get one of the new doll sizes and nobody will ever notice your old summer dress. Or take up the bandanna craze, especially for evening, and make everybody forget that your party dress has done duty since May.

Gloves in a striking shade may revolutionize your costume, and if you want to be very unusual, try polka dotted ones. Another trick you might try is getting a gay colored boutonniere and matching it up with gloves, handkerchief, belt, or compact.

Indo-Chinese Silk Yarn Makes Up Striking Dresses

Paris (U.P.).—France's loyalty to its knitting needles is unswerving. There is no couturier brave enough to ignore "handknits" or to exclude them from a collection. From the coarsest scarf to the gossamer blouses there is a finesse about French knitting which is hard to beat.

Indio-Chinese silk—heavy strands of pure silk in a multitude of colors mixed in stained-glass effect—is used by Anny Blatt for one of the most striking knit dresses of the season. The one-piece outfit has a skirt that is pleated while it is knit. A tiny white silk pique collar and a black leather belt are the only embellishments to the richness of the silk yarn.

White "week-end" yarn makes another stunning Blatt creation. Six rows of narrow navy blue crocheted lace edging run down the front forming slenderizing panels.

With a "Palm Beach" knit suit in off-white, Anny Blatt suggests a vestee of alternate lavender and rose stripes, wide and horizontal. On a white, backless knit beach dress she embroiders stripes in red and blue outline stitch.

LEMON GINGER FLIP

Combine 1 lemon (extract juice), ½ cup orange juice and sugar to taste. Crush ice to fill ½ glass and finish filling with ginger ale and fruit juices. Add a bit of shredded yellow peel from lemon.

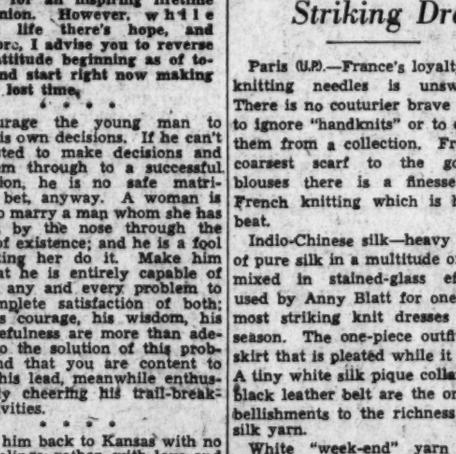
CHEESE CUSTARD IN TOMATO CUPS

Grate ¼ pound sharp cheese, add ½ cup of milk slowly and blend to a smooth paste. Beat 2 eggs, add rest of the ½ cup of milk, cheese and salt and pepper to taste. Cut cores from 4 medium tomatoes and scoop out all soft pulp. Set in casserole and pour cheese mixture into tomato cups. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in saucepan, add tomato pulp, 1 onion sliced and 1 bay leaf, and simmer until slightly reduced. Pour around tomato cups and bake in a slow oven (325 degrees F.) for 1 hour or until custard is set. Serve hot. Yield, 4 servings.

Jelly Test.

Want to know whether your jelly is done? Put a teaspoon of jelly on a cold plate and set it in the refrigerator for a minute or so. If the mixture jells when stirred with a spoon it is done. It is best to remove the jelly from the fire while you make the test.

Glove Crocheted in Two Pieces, Whipped Together, Is Smart



PATTERN 6143

A LACY GLOVE, crocheted in two pieces, whipped together. Embroidery in two contrasting colors (so smart now) adds that expensive look! Pattern 6143 contains instructions for making them in a small, medium and large size; materials needed; illustrations of gloves and of stitches.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post Household Arts Dept., 259 W. 14th street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Petticoats Return—Even on Furniture

The romantic swish of modest petticoats apparent in the dressmaker field has been heard in the furniture industry. That, among other new notes in home furnishings, was discovered by the 9,000 retail store buyers who attended the summer homefurnishings market in the Merchandise Mart, Chicago.

The petticoats in question were discovered on two tiny lounge chairs, upholstered in antique yellow taffeta, with ruffled flounces revealing a Montenegran pink striped taffeta underskirt. In the same room, clam shells, like those once used on grandmother's whatnot shelf, were placed on tables as ornaments.

Striped mattress ticking as a wall covering was another new note introduced by one furniture company, in a dining room where chairs were upholstered in quilted leather in the smoky blue shade which was shown often during the market.

Your Figure, Madame!

Outdoor Sport Is Better for Figure Than Any Daily Dozen.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE DAILY dozen is only a substitute for a dozen outdoor sports. If you can play outdoors for an hour or so a day, you can forget all about those awful ups and downs, because swimming, hiking, bicycling and badminton are a lot better for your health and are just as good for your figure. I'll be quite honest about it, natural outdoor exercise is better than any exercise routine that I can give you.

Exercise should be fun, and in sports it is. You should, by all means, enter into the activities you like best for the exhilaration they afford and because they help you to form the exercise habit. But if you are at all concerned about your figure, you should also choose the activities which use the muscles where you need slimming.

One of the favorite games of movie stars and models is tennis, because it tones the muscles of arms, shoulders and bust, waist, tummy, hips and legs—which should be streamlining enough.

Tennis Too Strenuous.

Tennis, however, comes under the heading of strenuous exercise, and it demands plenty of speed. Badminton, which uses the same sets of muscles, is much less strenuous.

Golf seems to be the most generally popular form of outdoor activity and it is a good one. The special advantage of this game is that it takes you out into the sun and fresh air for hours at a time, which is a sure cure for nervous tension. It takes almost two hours of walking to draw the blood away from the brain centers and into the muscles, and you can't play a golf game in much less time than that.

But even though you play regularly and often, you cannot rely solely on golf for streamlining your figure. You will need additional, specific exercises to tone and strengthen the muscles of the abdominal wall.

Strolling on the sand at the beach, aside from being fun, is an effective leg exercise.

Swimming is, of course, the perfect figure exercise, and if you really swim you will exercise all the important muscles without any strain. Rowing is another good aquatic exercise, affording vigorous use of the muscles of arms, shoulders and even abdomen.

If you are looking for a good leg exercise and one that is fun to do, try walking on the sand at the beach. Walking in the shifting sand is a real work-out, for it uses many more muscles than walking on a firm level. Beach walking, so I am told, is the way some of the movie stars keep their legs shapely.

Another activity which uses the leg muscles to advantage is bicycling. Pedaling contracts the calf muscles and develops smooth, lovely contours. It is excellent for firming and beautifying the thighs.

If you are a true sports enthusiast and engage in some of these activities regularly you are not likely to take on weight—unless you eat far beyond your needs.

Reveries of a Hostess.

Where on earth are all the men? Oh, they WOULD be over in that corner . . . all bunched up together. And the women sitting over there smirking at each other . . . and trying to look bright and interested. Well, I'm going to break up that football huddle.

• • • •

"Don't you men want to come over and join us? . . . How about you, Phil? . . . Mr. Whipper, we'd all love to hear some of your funny stories . . . In a minute? . . . Well be sure it's only a minute."

• • • •

Why WILL men act that way at parties? The next time I'm going to have 'em draw women's names out of hats as they come in the door. You'd think they'd see enough of each other downtown. Oh, I know what I'll do. I'll have Phil Nitter pass the cocktails . . . And Ted Sapp can pass water . . . and I'll send George Bunch around with the cigarets. That ought to start something.

• • • •

"Oh thank you so much, Phil! . . . And Ted. And George. Sit down, won't you? . . . Oh yes, PLEASE! Miss DeFrost, this is Mr. Nitter. And Mr. Sapp and—wait! Where are you men going? . . . Oh that's all right, just leave the trays here. . . . We-l-l, all right; but come back, won't you?"

• • • •

There they are! Back with the men again! I bet I try the older ones next time. If I could just get one of the married men over here . . . and get him to talking about himself . . . Now if the women were a bunch of prunes, I could understand it. But they're pretty . . . and all dressed up—but for what? . . . They're not even slow, for that matter. Take Beulah Stepp—I bet this is the first time she's ever talked this long to a bunch of women. If I could just turn her loose on that bunch of men . . . But I guess even Beulah couldn't go over and burst in on them—Oh, I know! Chet Speel will come over here if I ask him. He may be a joke, but at least he's a man.

• • • •

"Sit here, Chet, by Mrs. Plush . . . and Miss Smart. What's that, Miss Jigger? . . . Yes, Chet really is the bravest man I know! . . . Oh, girls! Chet's just gotten back from a vacation in California! Won't you tell us all about Hollywood, Chet?"

• • • •

Thank heaven for Chet Speel! I'll never laugh at him again for being a ladies' man. Say, if I could get a list of all the ladies' men in town, I'd pay 'em to come to my parties. I'm certainly sick of these diamonds in the rough. What a gorgeous moon! But how can all those poor women enjoy it . . . by themselves? For that matter, you can't tell me Claude Necker or Arch Sparks are having such a hot time over there with the men. I've got it! I'll send Grace Marsh and Beulah Stepp over there to get up a quartet. No; I'd better send Elsie Smiley. The women are all so funny about Beulah.

• • • •

"Say, these girls want you men to help them out on a quartet. You all know Miss Marsh . . . and Miss Smiley . . . Yes, we're going to sing old songs under the moon . . . Yes, you can too, sing . . . Why, you can too! . . . Everybody can; . . . And Mr. Whipper can play the guitar!"

• • • •

Now, that's better. Everyone is together—even if the men are still hugging each other. After the singing, I'll get them mixed up somehow. All it takes is a little ingenuity. I suppose the men are just bashful—now, where on earth is Phil Nitter going? . . . And George Bunch? Those fellows won't stay put a minute! Well, thank heavens, Beulah's got Horace Gay cornered . . .

• • • •

Say, wait Mr. Hyde! Is there anything I can get you? . . . Well, you'll come back, won't you . . . Was it water you wanted Mr. Fleet? I'm just going to have some passed. Now if you men will all just wait here, I'll have some drinks brought out . . . Oh Phil! . . . Ted! . . . Wait! . . . Wait!"

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, July 22.

BUSINESS took me the other day to that astonishing up-State New York community called Gloversville, where, no doubt, the gloves you wear are made. The art of glove making both names and rules the town, and is passed from generation to generation. Nowhere in America, probably, is there a more perfect example of "the guild" — closely guarded, jealous and handed on to the youngsters.

ALICE HUGHES.

Take what may seem to us the simple matter of stretching leather, which is the first vital process in the making of gloves. In reality, this is a guild craft, and passed along to grandchildren—even though a Mr. Johanson patented a machine to do the work some time ago. But, no, thank you, the old hand way is the better, and it is still practiced by the artisans of Gloversville.

As you know, the finest glove jobs are hand-sewn, and union wage scales have made this a very costly business. As a result, the bulk of this delicate art is sent to Puerto Rico for hand-sewing. However, if a rush job is needed nearer at hand, the materials are turned over to a little woman with a Scot's name who chugs away through that Rip Van Winkle country, dropping a dozen pair in many a farm and village cottage where women who have sewn gloves all their lives turn out the lot.

Most of the glovemaking is so traditionally poky and so filled with the hokus-pocus of Guild secrets that it seems unbearably slow to us who have grown up in the frantic machine age. But Gloversville and its people turn 'em out by the millions—and the bulk of the gloves you and I pull on are made by an ancient and honorable guild up in the Catskills, where tradition is still honored and observed.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—One of the prettier young actresses fighting out the summer on Broadway is named Gilda Oakleaf, who is a member of the cast of the British comedy, "Bachelor Born" . . . Turning the pages of an afternoon paper yesterday, I came upon this warning headline—"Geraniums for Winter Should Be Started Now!" So I rolled over and took another tug at the iced tea . . . Once in a long while we really make an investment in some personal doo-dad. Ten years ago I bought me a green ostrich feather boa—and about every three years it pops into fashion again. This is one of the summers when the thing is in style—so out comes the old Hughes green boa for another whirl in the mad lights.

Of all the girl reporters in town who might well have been miserably spoiled by her journalistic feats and her personal cuteness, the outstanding lady of the press is young Dorothy Kilgallen, the one who flew around the world on the tail of a box-kite. Dot has kept her head, and she has the prettiest blue eyes, the finest skin and the swellest figure any girl can want. Wonder who will draw the Dot Kilgallen straw in the matrimonial sweepstakes, the lucky dog?

• • • •

Another local girl is about to leave her newspaper job, get married, and go to India to live. She's shop reporter Kay Austin . . . Billy Rose, the mighty midget of show business, is using all his persuasive arts to get Al Jolson and his young wife, Ruby Keeler, to star in the glorified vaudeville shows he is running at his big Casa Manana, a Broadway show place.

I've wondered and worried about how these strapless evening dresses really do stay up. Certainly it can't be that stiff elastic sewn inside. Well, it isn't as Eleanor Neff, the beauteous beauty editor, tips me off. Many of the daring darlings, Eleanor tells me, literally plaster the bodice on them with strips of adhesive tape! Eleanor found this out when one of the strapless girls slid off her bar stool, slightly overcome with the lights and music; her dress slipped a bit, and showed that the poor thing was all strapped up with adhesive. Very distressing to see, Eleanor reports, and no doubt somewhat painful to undergo. Fashion, ah, fashion—fooey!

Daisies Outrank Orchids as Paris Dress Ornaments

Paris (U.P.).—A flower in the pocket is worth two on the shoulder. And daisies rank over orchids as far as Paris dressmakersare concerned.

Not since the 1900s has the use of artificial flowers assumed such importance as a decorative detail. Flowered prints are definitely giving way to stripes and geometrical designs, but separate flowers become better than ever. Perhaps Molyneux should receive credit for starting the boom on the flower market, for its was he who brought the lily-of-the-valley to the front and it was he who slung huge flower boas around the necks of his summer evening gowns.

But now the blossoms are slipping into pockets. Molyneux put six vari-colored tulips into the large patch pocket which stretched nearly across the front of a pale yellow circular skirt. (A black and white checked wool blouse completed the outfit.) The same versatile designer strung a row of dainty white daisies across the top of a pocket on a black silk dress.

Last Cabinet Hostess Here Is Packing Bags

Mr. and Mrs. Ickes Going to Alaska; Secretary Perkins to Arrive Monday; Mrs. Hull Returning Next Week.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Come the end of next week and a Cabinet couple around the Capital will be scarce as quintuplets. The only Cabinet hostess left in town tomorrow will be Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, who is packing her bags for a vacation that makes all of us Green with envy. She and the Secretary of the Interior will be off next Friday for a trip that will take them to Alaska and keep them out of the heat until after Labor Day.

HOPE R. MILLER.

As far as Secretary Ickes is concerned, the journey is both a business and pleasure venture for him. He looks after Alaska, along with other sections of our country, and he will do much besides admire the scenery while he is away. He and Mrs. Ickes will go from here to Seattle and sail from there August 3. In their tour of inspection, they will take special note of Alaskan railroads.

Thus far, the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull have stayed around pretty closely, but a few days ago, after having greeted and feted a round of official visitors, Mrs. Hull went off to Atlantic City for a brief vacation. She will be there over the week-end, returning to Washington in a few days. Whether the Secretary will join her there seemed to be something no one could tell me yesterday. Reports from his office had it that he would . . . that he wouldn't . . . that he hadn't decided . . . and that it depended on the weather. Anyway, if he does go, the sojourn will be a brief one, and he and Mrs. Hull will return soon.

Secretary Perkins Expected Here Monday

Another Cabinet officer who may be within shouting distance of the Capital next week-end is Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, who arrived in New York yesterday on the United States liner Washington after a trip abroad. Secretary Perkins went over primarily to attend the International Labor Office conference held in Geneva last month, but she managed to get about to several other centers before she left, and shortly before sailing she found time to win friends and influence people at a round of social functions in London. She is expected to remain in New York over the week-end and come on to the Capital on Monday.

The Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, who have stayed around Washington much longer than most Cabinet couples this summer, will be off to Cleveland tomorrow, where the "A. G.," as his wife calls him, will speak before the opening meeting of the American Bar Association tomorrow evening. They will stay in Cleveland through Friday, when Mr. Cummings will make another address before the convention, and then they will go on to Chicago to visit friends for a few days. From there, they will go by motor to the Wisconsin lakes to spend their vacation.

When will they return? "We don't know," Mrs. Cummings said yesterday. "This is one time we're starting out without setting a definite date to get back." She added, however, that they would be here, at latest by Labor Day.

Morgenthaus Land In France Today

The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., accompanied by their three children—Henry, Robert Morris and Joan—will arrive in France today and go directly to Paris, where they will be until the middle of next week. Later, they will proceed to southern France to spend the remainder of their vacation.

The Secretary of War, Harry H. Woodring, who accompanied his wife and children to Hyannisport, Mass., early this month, is still there and will be back in Washington only on brief trips until autumn. Still out of the city, also, are the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, who are enjoying the breezes at their vacation retreat, Rapidan Camp, in Virginia, once the summer White House of former President and Mrs. Herbert Hoover.

Where the George Marshalls go each summer, Mrs. James A. Farley also seems to go. Last July she visited them in Dallas, Tex., and not long ago, when the Postmaster General left for Alaska, Mrs. Farley was in Hollywod with the Marshalls. According to present plan, she will remain in California until autumn.

No definite date has been set for the return of the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, who recently sailed for a brief sojourn abroad. They are expected back, however, about the middle of next month.

Comfortably settled in cool Colorado—Green Mountain Falls to be exact—are Mrs. Henry A. Wallace and her daughter, Miss Jean B. Wallace. The Secretary of Agriculture, who is traveling about a bit and making speeches here, there and everywhere, probably will join them in Colorado for a vacation some time before the summer is over.

Egypt's Charge Is Dinner Host

The French Ambassador, Count Rene Doynel de Saint-Quentin, will be guest of honor at a dinner to be given this evening by Hussein Rady, Charge d'Affaires of the Egyptian Legation.

Among guests invited to attend are the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Mehmet Munir Ertegun, the Counselor of the Swedish Legation, Folke Wennerberg and Count and Countess Gabriel de Gramont of the French Embassy.

Fulton and their daughter, Miss Carrie Roper Fulton, will leave next week for a month's vacation at the University of Alabama, in Tuscaloosa, where they have taken a house on the campus. They will return by way of Mobile, New Orleans and Oxford, Mississippi, the latter being the home town of Mr. Fulton.

Thursday evening Miss Fulton entertained at a dinner in honor of Mrs. George F. Lull, jr., who with her husband will leave soon to join Mr. Lull's mother and father, Col. and Mrs. George F. Lull, at Carlisle Barracks, Pa. Assisting in the diningroom at the dinner were Mrs. Winton Elliott, Miss Madelaine Keilty, Miss Polly Cox and Miss Edna Kimberly.

Mr. Achainbourd is a motion picture director. He and his wife, who have an extensive circle of friends here and in New York, visited in the East in February.

Virginia Visitor and Her Hostess

Miss Eastham, who has been here since early this month, has been widely entertained. She is extending her visit through next week.

Virginia Diners To Dance Later

A number of dinners in and around the Virginia hunting country will precede the second of two summer subscription dances to be given in Middleburg, Va., tonight.

Samuel Sands will be host at a dinner in honor of his house guest, Mrs. Mary Merkel, of Green Hill Farms, Philadelphia, having in the company Mr. and Mrs. George Robert Slater; Dr. and Mrs. R. L. Boothe, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sabin, Mr. and Mrs. Turner Wiltshire, Mr. and Mrs. Duval Tyler, Mr. and Mrs. Holland Potter and William H. Lipscomb.

Mr. and Mrs. Luddington Patton also will give a dinner, as will Mr. and Mrs. Arthur White, Mrs. Amory Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Iselin, Mr. and Mrs. David Finley, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Skinner and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jones. All members of each dinner party will go on later to the subscription dance, which, like the first one on July 9, will be held at The Shelter, formerly the home of Mrs. Amory Perkins.

The subscription dances, the initial one of which was a great success, have been organized by Miss Bettina Belmont and John Dudley, of Middleburg, and Jock Merriam, of Washington.

Dailey, of the West Virginia State Circuit Court, who was widely known in Washington.

Assisted by the Rev. T. H. Daffin, the Rev. C. K. Poole, pastor of the church, officiated at the ceremony that united two pioneer families of West Virginia.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a bouffant gown of white marquisette trimmed in lace over satin. Her long veil was held in place by a cap of white orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Edwin Brooks Warner, of Parkersburg, W. About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

NOT everybody's dream vacation centers about either blue water, white sails, green mountains, ocean liners or golf. Quite a few prominent Washington residents, as a matter of fact, have been considering possible summer holidays in which none of these attractions figure. In answer to our queries as to how they would like to spend the rest of the summer, here is what a group of dignitaries replied:

DUDLEY HARMON.

Cabinet officer's wife—"I would like to go to a place where I wouldn't see any little sausages on toothpicks, and where people would not be allowed to gather in groups of more than ten in a room. Anybody who raises his or her voice above a whisper would be shot at sunrise."

Ambassador's wife—"A place where calling cards have never been seen is my idea of Utopia. Also, the inhabitants would be completely ignorant of the gentle custom known as "dropping in."

* * * *

THE WIFE of a prominent Senator and the wife of a Representative were both agreed that their ideal vacations would be spent in surroundings where constituents are timid, shrinking souls, whose relatives all have or don't need jobs, and who loathe sightseeing. Even better than that, they agreed, and probably more possible of realization, would be a desert island.

The head of an important New Deal agency says, "I'd like to go where there are no Senators and Representatives. Preferably a spot in the South Seas or Darkest Africa, where nobody wants anything further than bananas or the milk from cocoanuts. There will be no slums to be cleared, railroads to be merged, or business concerns to be loaned money to."

* * * *

PROMINENT HOSTESS says her vacation would be spent at a place where nobody has any rank. Or any friends who ask to bring strange female house guests to her luncheons when, after a heroic struggle, she has finally succeeded in getting just enough men to go around.

A certain debutante's vacation dreams are rather modest. She asks only that there be a continual shortage of girls; that the swimming instructor be from Harvard, the tennis pro from Yale, and the riding master a Princeton stalwart.

When we questioned the young man about town he replied he would be perfectly satisfied if he could find a place where people really liked to be served cheap liquor and where the girls insisted, like Cinderella, on going home at midnight.

Personally, this columnist believes the real way to spend a holiday is to do as some intrepid Girl Scouts from New York did recently—take over a sailing schooner (none of this yacht stuff, thank you) and cruise up and down the Coast, taking reefs in the mains'l and hoisting the jib themselves.

* * * *

A NUMBER of prominent people who have chosen Europe as their playground during the late summer have selected their sailing dates. Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis will embark August 3 on the Normandie and Mr. and Mrs. Lee Warren will sail August 6 on the Conte de Savoia, disembarking at Villefranche on the Riviera. All four will go to the shoot they have rented in Hungary along with Mr. and Mrs. F. Lammot Belin and the former Ambassador to France and Mrs. Walter Edge.

The Belins have been in Europe since last spring; the Davises are at "Bayberry Land," their Southampton plane, and the Warrens are enjoying the cool breezes at Naragansett, which, they tell us, is even gayer than Newport this summer.

The young George Grant Masons have found the house they've been looking for and have leased the residence of Mrs. Albert Simms (formerly Ruth Hanna McCormick) at 1224 Thirtieth street in Georgetown.

One of the loveliest in the Capital, the house was remodeled several years ago by Mrs. Simms. One of the most attractive features is the large garden behind, with its terraces, brick walks and fountains. There is also a little playhouse, which was the scene of the famous stunt party given in May by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr. The house was occupied until recently by Mrs. Harold Walker, Mrs. Robert's mother, and the late Mr. Walker, who died several weeks ago.

Fernanda de Mohrenschildt, McAdoo Kin, in Debut Tonight

500 Guests of Exclusive Newport Society Are Invited for the Event; Her Mother Is Daughter of the California Senator.

One of the outstanding parties of the summer season at Newport, R. I., will take place this evening when Miss Fernanda de Mohrenschildt, daughter of Mrs. Francis Taylor, makes her bow to society. Her mother, the former Nona H. McAdoo, is the daughter of Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, of California and Washington.

Five hundred guests, representing the most exclusive members of Newport's summer colony, have been invited to the event. The Taylor Villa, scene of many famous parties during the life of the late Henry A. C. Taylor, already has been transformed into a make-believe setting, rich with colored lights and masses of greenery.

All decorations have been chosen to carry out an amber and blue color scheme. Huge flood lights have been placed in the trees to light the entire estate and the famous cliff walk that borders the grounds.

Markel's orchestra will play for the dancing, and there will be a supper late in the evening.

Prior to the debut party, there will be a number of dinner parties with guests going to greet Miss de Mohrenschildt afterwards.

Mr. and Mrs. Snowden A. Fahnestock, of Washington, who are spending the summer at Newport, will entertain at their home Ker Avor. Among the guests will be Mrs. Fahnestock's mother, Mrs. James M. Beck, of Washington, who is also at the resort for the season.

Others who will entertain at dinner are William H. Vanderbilt, candidate of the Republican nomination for Governor of Rhode Island, and Mrs. Vanderbilt. They will give their party at the Clambake Club. Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel P. Hill will have guests at their Bellevue avenue villa; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Wheeler also will give a dinner, as will Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Young and Mr. and Mrs. J. Gordon Douglas.

Miss de Mohrenschildt has taken an active part in affairs of the younger set at Newport and has been an outstanding figure at tennis, bathing at Bailey's Beach and golfing at the Country Club.

Chevy Chase Club Home To Include Art Workshop

Metal Work, Wood Carving, Ivory Miniatures and Oil Painting Represented in Membership of Section Outsanding Among Women's Groups.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

One of the rooms in the new clubhouse of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase—work on which is progressing despite the rain—will be a workshop for the art section. Members, clad in smocks, will be busy there next season.

In many clubs the art groups content themselves with visiting galleries, discussing the lives and works of the great masters and hearing lectures by authorities who appear as guest speakers. In Chevy Chase, the section does all of these things and more—hence the workshop.

For the last six years, members of the section who have a bent in that direction have been taking courses in metal work. Mrs. Henry DeCoursey Adams, present chairman of the group, is one of the members of the class. It met originally at Leland Junior High School, later at Gordon Junior High, and for the last three years has held its sessions at Woodrow Wilson Junior High School on Saturdays with William T. Baxter, teacher of metal crafts as instructor. It is because of the members' activity in this direction that they are to have a room all to themselves, with equipment for both their metal work and for painters as well.

Mrs. Adams last year, among other things, made two dozen silver bracelets, all but five of which she has given to friends. She also has at her home a handsome copper bowl which has been much admired and which on several occasions she has had opportunity to sell, but has declined. Some of the members have sold their work, but most of them take such pleasure in their craftsmanship they either keep the pieces they design or give them to friends.

Mrs. Clarence Dawson Leads Metal Classes

Mrs. Clarence E. Dawson, sr., leader of the metal craft class, is conceded by her sister workers to be one of the finest among them. Mrs. Roy M. Palmer is another who has done much beautiful work. Others in the group are Mrs. Bruce E. Erikson, Mrs. Manly Michaels, Mrs. James Giles and Mrs. Harry W. Price. Several non-club members also were enrolled.

They all make bowls, trays, plates, bookends and other pieces from copper, sometimes silver-plating them. The jewelry is of silver, often set with semiprecious stones.

An exhibition of their work was prepared by Mrs. Dawson last winter and was on display for three days during the women's short course at the University of Maryland. It included hand-wrought copper and silver, oils and water colors by the painter members of the section and wood carving. Mrs. William Nolan is the wood carver and has an apt student in Mrs. Palmer, who, Mrs. Nolan says, has done unusually fine work.

Mrs. Nolan, a native of Czechoslovakia, learned carving there while attending a private schcool. In the living room of her home in Somerset are handsome examples of her work—one a table, the top of which she carved in ten days. The intricate design, which looks at first glance like a beautiful lace covering on the table because of its delicacy, suggests ten years' work rather than ten days. She did it at the end of her school course when some of her fellow students challenged her with a bet that she could not accomplish it. She achieved it in that time, but went to bed to recover afterwards and would never attempt a similar feat again, she says.

Carving Fireplace Panels a Hobby

Other furniture she has carved includes chairs, stools, small chests and other little pieces, and she is now about to begin work on a coffee table. Her particular hobby is doing panels for fireplaces, and one of these she made for Mrs. Lona Miller Keplinger, well-known watercolorist and a former member of the section. Mrs. Keplinger has spent the past year in California, but expects to return to the Capital this season and to resume her activities in the club.

Mrs. Nolan has had no other pupils in the art section and says she is not surprised as wood-carving is a craft which progresses slowly and is tedious work which does not appeal to most people. She enjoys it, however, and sketches her own designs. She also is a painter, but devotes her time chiefly to her carving.

Another member of the section is Miss Emma Siboni, who is widely known as a miniature artist and does her portraits on ivory. Mrs. Robert M. Houdabush, leader of the art appreciation group, is another gifted artist and another is Mrs. Liefur Magnusson. Both work in oil.

Section Brings Honors to Club

An interesting coincidence was that the Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs this spring bought one of Mrs. Magnusson's pictures as the penny art fund prize and that it was awarded to the Chevy Chase Club for its outstanding work in art. A painting by Mrs. Miles C. Trowbridge, also a member of the section, was bought by the federation as the penny art fund award for smaller clubs. Miss Siboni was awarded second prize in the State federation art contest, bringing another honor to the club through its artist members.

Among others in the painters' group are Mrs. Charles S. Morgan, one of several who studied under Lester Stevens, noted watercolorist who had an exhibition at the Arts Club last season; Mrs. Jean Hawley, Mrs. H. B. Leary, jr., who works in pastels; Mrs. Fred Parks and Mrs. Walter Miles, who had a private exhibition at the studio of the D. C. Branch of the League of American Pen Women last year.

The section, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Roudabush, who preceded Mrs. Adams as its head, established a "circulating gallery" which is believed by the members to be unique. There are now 20 pictures, including eight new framed prints, which were added last year. These are loaned to members for a month at a time to hang in their own homes and to study, after which they are passed on to others for the same length of time. On the back of each picture is pasted a brief sketch of the artist's life, with something about the school he represents. The executive board of the club has granted an appropriation of $30 for the purchase of other prints for the collection.

The section program in the last year stressed art appreciation in line with the theme of the National Committee for Art Appreciation.

Skilled Wood-Carver Illustrates How It Is Done

MRS. WILLIS NOLAN, a member of the Art Section of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, gives her little daughter, Donia, a simple lesson in wood-carving. The table at which they are shown, is carved in a design as delicate as lace and was done by Mrs. Nolan in ten days. She is a native of Czechoslovakia and learned the art there. Below is the section chairman, Mrs. Henry DeCoursey Adams, who works in metal.

Bedtime Stories

A Search in Vain.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

There is no search so wholly vain
That there is naught from it to gain.
—Old Mother Nature.

Old Mother Nature says something there. You may not find the thing you are looking for. To this extent your search may be unsuccessful. But you are sure to find other things to increase knowledge.

Tommy, Sue and Sammy found it so when they went searching for some sign of Crippy, the three-legged Coon, who for a week had failed to visit Aunt Sally's Woodhouse Night Club. This had caused Aunt Sally no little concern, and so Tommy had promised to look for signs outside, although he had no expectation of finding any.

First, they visited the garden. They found certain proof that Peter Rabbit had been there, and that Johnny Chuck had been there, and that Jimmy Skunk had been there, but there was no evidence that a Coon had been there.

Then they went to the cornfield. It was too early for corn to be in the milk, and that is when Coons love it, but Tommy thought that Crippy might have visited it to see how it was coming along. However, nowhere could they find the footprint of a Coon.

"We'll go over to the Green Forest next," said Tommy.

"Why not the Old Pasture?" Sammy wanted to know.

"Because Reddy Fox and Mrs. Reddy are living there, and I don't believe that Coon would like the neighborhood. Coons like water and we are pretty sure to find signs of one along the Laughing Brook, over in the Green Forest," replied Tommy.

When they reached the Laughing Brook they searched carefully along both banks, especially around quiet little pools. It was in the mud on the edge of one of these that Sue found footprints and called to Tommy to come and see if they might be a Coon's.

Tommy gave them hardly more than a glance. "Billy Mink's," said he. "Billy has been here, fishing, and not so long ago. A Coon's tracks are a lot bigger than those, Sue, and different.

A few minutes later Tommy called the others to a little sandy bar over which he was bending. "Coon," was his cryptic statement as he pointed to some faint tracks.

"Do you suppose that they are Crippy's, cried Sue excitedly.

"Tell me what you think," replied Tommy.

Sue and Sammy studied the faint footprints, but could read nothing in them. In fact, it is doubtful if they would have noticed those tracks at all had they happened along there, instead of Tommy.

"If you say those are Coon tracks, of course they are, but I don't believe even you can tell whether or not they were made by Aunt Sally's Crippy," said Sammy.

"You have a lot to learn before you will become a good tracer, Sammy," replied Tommy. "Crippy didn't make those tracks."

"How do you know she didn't?" demanded Sammy.

"Which leg had she lost?" asked Tommy.

"I know! It was the left front one" cried Sue.

"All right. Now, look at those tracks and see if you can find a print of a left front foot," replied Tommy.

Sue and Sammy squatted down, the better to study those footprints. "I think that is a left print," said Sammy somewhat doubtfully, as he pointed to one track.

Tommy nodded in agreement. "Sure, that's a left footprint," he agreed. "And right there are two prints, side by side, a left and a right. So, of course, these tracks were not made by Crippy, but by some other Coon, perhaps one of Crippy's children."

Then they went to the cornfield.

In two other places along the Laughing Brook tracks made by a Coon were found, but in each case the animal had left the prints of four feet. Crippy had not been fishing or hunting Frogs along the Laughing Brook. All that afternoon they looked and looked, but the search was in vain so far as Crippy was concerned. But they had a good time, and Sue and Sammy learned much of wood lore.

Mrs. Sorenson Returns Home

Mrs. Hans Sorenson, junior past regent of Columbia Chapter, Women of the Moose, who was a delegate to the annual international conference of the organization at Mooseheart, Ill., in June, has just returned from a vacation in Iowa, where she went direct from the convention. Last evening, at the chapter meeting in Moose Hall, Mrs. Sorenson gave a comprehensive report of the convention activities.

As this was the first meeting she had attended since completing her term as graduate regent of Columbia Chapter, she was presented with the emblem of the past regent. The presentation was made on behalf of the chapter by Mrs. William Phythian, a past regent.

Chairmen of the various committees, appointed by the new senior regent, Mrs. Calvin Giles, at the previous meeting of the chapter, reported their plans for the coming season and secured the approval of the membership. In addition to the plans announced at the meeting of the chairmen Wednesday, Mrs. Samuel Miller, child care and training committee chairman, will continue the study course begun last spring. The next meeting of this group to be held July 28, at 8 p. m., at Moose Hall. She will also resume the story hour next fall at the Children's Emergency Home of the Central Union Mission.

The Mooseheaven chairman, Mrs. E. T. Deegan, displayed the "Novelty Shop" of small household articles, through the sale of which her committee will obtain funds for its work.

Social service activities in connection with prenatal care will be studied by the chairman, Mrs. Robert Baldwin, and her social service committee.

Madame Chairman

MISS MARY ELLEN DASHIELL, president of the Washington Story League, is away for part of the summer, visiting friends and places on the Pacific Coast. She went to Seattle on business and from there down to California for her vacation.

Last year Miss Dashiell was in the Capital for most of the season and led the story-telling group in its customary program bringing cheer to shut-ins and to the underprivileged. This season she expects to come back with some new stories to tell of places she has been, people she has met and some of the lore of the West.

The league members gather for regular meetings at which they entertain each other, sometimes original stories and other times with old tales retold. They also go into the alleys and parks in the summer and provide entertainment for children and grown-ups as well, with their story-telling. On request from institutions they give programs there, often adding music for variety—but not deviating thereby from the plan of story-telling, for most songs have a real story, the members explain.

If any Washingtonians have been, until now, unacquainted with the league and its mission, they are destined to know more about it, for its national convention is scheduled to be held here next month.

SPEAKING of story tellers, one of those whose "Little Talks on Large Topics" always are popular, is Alice Hutchins Drake. Miss Drake, who was one of the first women in Washington to broadcast, still has a weekly radio program to which her friends of the air look forward.

* * * *

Today she and her mother, Mrs. Thomas Edmiston Drake and sister, Miss Helen Drake, leave for Middlebury, Vt., for the remainder of the summer. She has been invited to give there on Tuesday the program, "Green Things Growing," which she presented last spring at a meeting of the Political Study Club, for which she served as program chairman during the season.

* * * *

As part of it, she will read from the works of two Washington poets, Anne Robinson and Catherine Cate Coblentz. She will read from "Little Miss April," a book of poems by the former, and several selected poems by the latter, on the Bishop's Garden at the National Cathedral.

* * * *

The program will be given at a tea for 25 guests, most of them literary people, at the home of Mrs. Stewart Andrews in Middlebury, where Miss Olive Dean, of Washington is spending the summer.

Miss Drake will give two other programs while she is in Vermont, "Love in Search of a Word" and "Another Drum."

MRS. MARTIN A. MORRISON, wife of former Representative Morrison, of Indiana, now established at her country home, Solitude, on the crest of the Blue Ridge Mountains near Snickers Gap, Va., was hostess Wednesday at a porch picnic party held by members of Alpha Epsilon Alpha, Washington alumnae chapter of the Alpha Chi Omega National Sorority.

Mrs. Morrison welcomed her guests on the long veranda overlooking Loudoun valley. Among those present were Mrs. A. B. Ambler, jr., and son; Mrs. Leland Graham and children, Mrs. Carl B. Gerber and children, Mrs. Owen L. Scott, Mrs. E. L. Douglas, Mrs. James T. Jardine, Mrs. J. M. J. Wood, and Mrs. M. B. McReynolds, and Mr. Morrison, mother and husband of the hostess, respectively. Later in the afternoon the party was joined by Miss Sade Styron, also of Washington, and her guest, Mrs. I. C. Hutson, of Edgemoor, Md.

Poetry Reading Is Held at Home Of Mrs. Sherrill

Evening Honors Miss Alethea Anderson, Author of 'The Far Call.'

The Poetry Section of the District of Columbia Branch, National League of American Pen Women, last night was entertained at the home of its retiring chairman, Mrs. Robert Sherrill, in Chevy Chase. The informal evening of music and poetry was arranged in honor of Miss Alethea Alderson, chairman, for the coming season, who is author of a book of verse, "The Far Call," and also a librarian in the Public Library of the District.

A feature of the program was the presentation by Dr. Homer C. House, head of the English department of the University of Maryland, of excerpts from his book of poetry, "Sun Dances," including the poem from which it takes its name. Dr. House, who is a gifted reader as well as a writer of verse, also illustrated to his audience some of the Indian chants with which he is familiar.

"Gossamered Glory," a book of poems by Ida Elaine James, one of the members of the section, which was recently published and received wide praise, was the other feature of the program. Mrs. Ira Castles read several selections from it and also sang songs which have been composed to Mrs. James' lyrics, with Mrs. James accompanying her at the piano. She called attention to the close relation between poetry and music and the fact that Mrs. James had the facility to express herself both by word and note.

Miss Muriel James, daughter of the poet, was among the guests at the affair.

When refreshments were served, Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, new president of the District branch and editor of The Blue Moon, poetry magazine, presided at the punch table.

Among others present were Mrs. Inez Barclay Kirby, one of the vice presidents, who has won prizes in poetry contests conducted by the A. A. U. W., the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs and the Arts Club; Mrs. Frederic Hays, Miss Mattie Richards Tyler, Miss Ivy Lindsley, Mrs. Faith Davidson, Mrs. Leila Pier King, Miss Anna Priestly, Miss John Frances Steele, Mrs. Agnes Newman, who is president of the Soroptimist Club as well as an active member of the Pen Women; Dr. Emily M. Maddox, Miss Alida Smith, Mme. Felian Garzia, Miss Florence Marshall, Miss Ruby Nevins and Miss Phronsie Marsh.

Among the guests in addition to poet members who were present were Miss Nellie G. Bourdeaux, Mrs. Elizabeth Tilton, Miss Peggy Lawshe, Miss Louise Leavitt, Miss Eileen A. Kellerman and Carleton Wahl.

Daughters Council Gives Frances Good A Surprise Shower

Golden Rule Council, Daughters of America, last night gave a shower at Northeast Masonic Temple in honor of its recently installed inside sentinel, Mrs. Frances Mills Good, whose marriage took place just two weeks ago.

Mrs. Mabel Sudwarth, chairman of the good of the order committee, was in charge of the arrangements for the shower, which was a complete surprise to the bride. When recess was called in the regular meeting, she was escorted from the room and blindfolded and led back to a chair which had been covered in white as a place of honor. Mrs. Margaret Taylor and Mrs. Eva Wood, colorbearers, stood at either side. There followed a parade of the members to offer congratulations and present their gifts.

The council has two other recent brides among its officers, Mrs. Katherine Holle Schwamp, councilor, and Mrs. Alberta Anderson Benfield, associate councilor. The council presented each of them wedding gifts but altered the procedure last night by giving the miscellaneous shower for Mrs. Good.

San Francisco, Calif., July 22, 1938.

Apparently Marvin McIntyre, of the White House secretarial, has mastered the secret of how to get along without sleep. During the last two weeks, with the White House on wheels across the continent, he has often been up at his duties until 4 o'clock in the morning. By 8 a. m. the sleepless secretary has been on the job again, a miracle of suavity on three or four hours sleep.

For people who hate to miss a world fair, 1939 will be a restless year, shuttling back and forth between New York and San Francisco. The record for transcontinental travel is certain to be broken . . . The geniuses of the Golden Gate have thought of everything; they have even devised overlapping gates to stop the Pacific breezes where they strike the Treasure Island Exposition.

George Creel. . . . new niche.

Far more thrilling than flying or a ride on a roller coaster is a ride behind a motorcycle escort through the hilly, crowded downtown streets of San Francisco at 60 miles an hour . . . Next time I think I'd rather miss a train, even a Presidential train.

"—Alcatraz, an added attraction."

When a President goes off on a vacation he does not want to be surrounded by grave, serious men filled with problems, worries and affairs of state. He needs a few blithe comic spirits to make him forget his burdens occasionally for a moment . . . They may be brilliant intellects, they may have responsibilities, they need not be clowns, but they must have the gift of levity at the right moment . . .

Alcatraz Island, where the toughies take the rest cure, is just a few brassie shots from the Treasure Island Exposition . . . Visitors to the fair are apt to get a bigger thrill from a closeup of the prison rock than from almost anything at the fair, and field glasses will doubtless be at a premium . . . Probably the convicts will be wanting telescopes, too.

Someone put several cases of California champagne aboard the Presidential train in California, and one or two bottles were presented to the occupants of each stateroom. At first the rumor spread that Mabel Willebrandt, who was once the prohibition czar, was the donor . . . Later it was established that the champagne came from Senator McAdoo. Overcoming their scruples, some of the writers on the train tasted it, and found it as good as the imported bubble water.

"—blithe spirits for vacation."

The radio chains ought to put George Creel, of the San Francisco Exposition, and Grover Whalen, chief of the New York Fair, on a national hookup to debate the virtues of their respective 1939 shows. Whalen, of course, would do better with television, for he is something to see when he puts on his best suit and necktie. Creel, half-forgotten since his famous submarine publicity coup during the war, is carving out a new niche on the West Coast. His wisecracks make some of the best California people a little nervous.

Elk Mate Call Draws 'Bulls' for Inspector

A loud noise, not unlike the cry of an elk during mating season, disturbed police headquarters at 7 o'clock last night.

Detectives scurred to roll call, for they have learned that this is Inspector Thompson's latest method of getting them there on time.

The sound came from a sort of fog horn, set up outside the inspector's office. It is operated by a button which the inspector pushes when he wants to summon his men.

Miss Harriet Brundage, a patron of the Public Library's "music room," listens to a recording.

Music, from Alexander's Ragtime Band, as played by Vincent Lopez and his orchestra, to Dvorak's Slavonic Rhapsody, Opus 45, No. 3, as interpreted by the London Philharmonic Orchestra may be heard almost anyday of the week at Public Library—by special appointment.

One of the features of the library's music division, which was instituted four years ago, is provision of an up-to-date victrola, more than 135 volumes of phonograph records, and a "listening" room.

"You know, it's a funny thing," an attendant said, "the young people come in to listen to records, and you'd think they'd ask for 'The Darktown Strutters' Ball' or 'Baby, Won't You Please Come Home.' But they don't. It's usually Beethoven's Symphonies or Tschaikowsky's Symphony No. 5 in E Minor."

Not so long ago a man came to the library and wanted to hear some funeral music. He said he had to give a talk before the Cemetery Association showing the relationship of death to the different arts.

The victrola and records are available to the public for limited periods. On Monday, Tuesday and Saturday you may reserve the music room for an hour period between 2 and 5 p. m. and from 7:15 to 9 p. m. On Wednesday and Thursday the time is from 2 to 5 p. m. and no night session.

Reservations for the victrola service are booked solidly for one month. Every available hour is taken.

During the past year 12 "evenings with the Victrola" were conducted by the division on alternate Monday nights. A total of 1,603 persons listened to the phonograph during the year, as compared with 1,430 listeners last year.

The phonograph and records were purchased from a $1,000 fund given the library by the Carnegie Corporation, according to Dr. George T. Bowerman, librarian.

The library does not solicit for phonograph records but they wouldn't be refused if received.

FBI Solved 124 Kidnaps Since 1932; Missed 3

Cases Listed as Uncomplete Are Mattson, Fried and Levine.

G-men have solved 124 out of 127 kidnaping cases since the enactment of the Federal kidnaping law, June 22, 1932, according to an annual report made public yesterday by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The three unsolved kidnapings were those of Charles Mattson, 10, of Tacoma, Wash.; Arthur Fried, 32-year-old businessman of Westchester, N. Y., and Peter Levine, 10, of New Rochelle, N. Y. The two boys were killed.

In the cases solved, 273 persons were convicted in Federal and State courts, the punishment including 11 death sentences, 41 life sentences, and other sentences totaling 3,382 years. Seven kidnapers committed suicide, 6 were killed by officers, 7 were killed by gang members and 2 were lynched.

The FBI campaign against the white slave traffic, the report showed, brought a sharp upturn in convictions. In the fiscal year of 1938 a total of 576 persons were convicted for this offense, receiving sentences totaling 1,348 years. This was the highest number in the history of the bureau.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the bureau, figured activities of his G-men were worth $7.64 for every $1 they cost. He listed the figure of $47,568,419, representing stolen property recovered, fines imposed and savings effected. The 1938 expenses of the bureau totaled $6,222,976.

During the fiscal year, 1,923 fugitives from Federal justice were located by special agents of the bureau in various parts of the country, an increase of 620, or 47 per cent, over 1937. In addition, 7,003 fugitives wanted by State and local agencies were apprehended through the operation of the bureau's fingerprint division.

Today, Hoover reported, there are 9,034,368 sets of fingerprints on file with the bureau, and 5,000 criminal prints are being received each day from law enforcement agencies in this country and abroad. The bureau also is receiving 2,500 sets of fingerprints each day from citizens who want to place them on file for their own protection.

During the year, 3,253 stolen motor vehicles, valued at $1,484,437, were recovered in cases involving the motor vehicle theft act, an increase over 1937 when 2,633 stolen cars were recovered.

Director Hoover reported 103 persons were convicted of extortion and given sentences totaling 784 years.

Road Rudeness Held Cause of Half of Wrecks

W. I. Cleveland Hits 'Bad Mannered' Drivers in Radio Talk.

Bad manners on the highway were labeled one of the major causes of accidents by Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the American Automobile Association District of Columbia Motor Club, in a radio address last night over Station WOL. His talk featured a meeting of the Accident Prevention Institute of the Junior Board of Commerce at the studio.

"Rudeness is always disagreeable," Cleveland said, "but in traffic it is also dangerous. One man who has taken the trouble to survey the automobile accident situation systematically says that consistent practice of road courtesy by everyone would reduce traffic accidents in the United States by at least one-half."

Should a motorist carry his bad manners with him when he became a pedestrian, Cleveland said, he would dash at top speed by others on the sidewalk, crowd others out of the way at building entrances and shout at the top of his lungs at anyone crossing his path. He outlined qualifications for a well-mannered driver:

"The sportsmanlike driver sets up certain standards of conduct and abides by them. He knows his car thoroughly. He is well informed about traffic regulations and obeys them. He refuses to drive if the car is not in sound condition. He accepts his civic responsibilities and he is tolerant of the less skillful driver."

Weekly meetings of the Accident Prevention Institute usually are held in the Traffic Court building and are open to the public. Last night's meeting was transferred to the studio of WOL because of Cleveland's broadcast.

Merit Basis Plea Voiced By Mitchell

Urged Passage of Bill Extending Scope of System.

Civil Service Commissioner Harry B. Mitchell last night suggested passage by the next Congress of the Ramspeck bill as a means of empowering the President to extend the merit system beyond the scope of the June 24 executive orders.

The Ramspeck measure died in the mill of the last Congress following a long contention over its competetive examination feature and since then the Georgia Representative has indicated that he will renew his fight for its passage.

Commissioner Mitchell, speaking before the District Department of the American Federation of Government Employes, said he would favor passage of the bill as an added step in enlarging the merit system in the Government.

Attitude Outlined.

Under the executive orders of June 24, the civil service provisions are extended to all Federal employes whose jobs are nonpolicy forming or whose positions are not expressly exempt by statute from the civil service. The Ramspeck measure would empower the President even further to extend the merit system by including under civil service as many positions as he sees fit.

The attitude of the commission is for a noncompetetive examination as against the proposed competitive examination, and it was considered that the author of the bill would concede to the change, particularly since the competitive feature was regarded as the main stumbling block to passage in the last Congress.

Workers at the Agriculture Department Experimental Staion, Beltsville, Md., who are not in the civil service, yesterday declared themselves to be in "an economic no man's land" with a "crying need for protection and uniformity and requested the Agriculture personnel officer to include them in civil service under the executive orders of June 24.

"Where the worker in private industry is assured of protection in the twilight of his life by social security, and the bulk of Government employes may fall back on retirement in their old age, Beltsville's workers must build their windfall out of their low earnings or become dependents in their waning years," it was said in a formal statement to Roy Hendrickson, the department personnel officer.

Will Study Plea.

Hendrickson's office yesterday said "the matter would be explored fully and if there is any way to bring them in, we will do so." As in so many other instances, the matter is subject to interpretation, and the way in this case may be difficult because so many of the Beltsville workers are rated as unskilled laborers, a group not contemplated by the Executive orders.

This point was recognized in the plea for admission under civil service: "While it is true that many of the men were hired as unskilled laborers and are still regarded as such, even casual study will reveal that through years of arduous service many of these men have acquired sufficient knowledge and experience as to make them fully qualified for skilled work which they are now performing without recognition."

"Such prevailing circumstance on a permanent job is more than enough to kill the ambition and dull the enthusiasm of any man," the petition declared. The petition was presented under auspices of United Federal Workers Local 36.

Weeping Boy, 8, Seeks Ill Mother In Wrong Hospital

Eight-year-old Linwood Sherwood wandered, weeping into Sibley Hospital last night.

"I want my mommy," he sobbed. "She's an awfully pretty lady, and she's sick and in the hospital.

Attaches and nurses learned that the boy's mother was Mrs. Catherine Sherwood, of 1028 Eighth street northwest, and they searched their records and found no patient by that name.

So they called a scout car, which took Linwood to his sister, Margaret, 6, and a maid who explained Mrs. Sherwood was being operated on for acute appendicitis at Casualty Hospital.

Poor Children's Camp Fund Stands at $316 —316 Days' Respite From Hunger and Grief

The bugle sounds for meal time at a typical camp. The Post Camp Fund will provide days in camp with healthful meals for a number of Washington's underprivileged children.

This is the fifth in a series of articles to help Washington's underprivileged children. The sixth will appear tomorrow.

Yesterday's contributions to The Post's camp fund brought to 22 the number of children who will enjoy a two-week vacation at camp. The fund now totals $316.94.

The goal of the campaign is $1,400, which will send 100 children to camp. Two weeks' tuition is $14; one week, $7, and one day, $1. Contributions should be deposited in the camp fund box in the vestibule of The Post Building or mailed to the camp fund editor.

The 100 children, none of whom can afford a vacation this summer, were selected on the basis of their need by the camp scholarship committee of the Council of Social Agencies. Today The Post presents the stories of ten more boys and girls as told to the council by the social agencies which recommended them.

Some Case Histories.

Undernourishment and lack of vitality keep Tony from suceeding in school the doctor has told his mother. As a result the 9-year-old boy will have to repeat third grade next year, in the same class as his younger brother, who teases him about his "dumbness." Heavy financial strain on the family has caused Tony's poor physical condition.

Twelve-year-old Steve lives in a one-room apartment with an overprotective mother whose husband has deserted her. She has a WPA job which barely supports them. Irregular meal hours, faulty diet and frequent moves to new neighborhoods have sapped Steve's strength.

Mitchell and Raymond, 15 and 13, are the "housewives" of their family. After their mother's death, they undertook to keep house for their father and an employed sister. Domestic duties and financial strain (the family's income never exceeds $12 weekly) are turning boys into old men.

Handicapped Again.

Fourteen-year-old Frank is one of three boys recommended for camp by the Committee on Service to the Blind. Despite his handicap, he was a great success as a camper last summer, winning awards for swimming and basketball throwing. A large family and a small income keep him from returning to camp this year.

Will, 10, also is blind. He lives with his mother and brother in a crowded two-room apartment on his mother's $10 salary. The third boy recommended by the committee, 17-year-old Dave, also suffers from a crowded home. Neither boy has been to camp before.

Nicholas, 12, lost out when his parents separated several years ago. His mother kept the custody of two younger children but turned Nick over to his father, who now pays his board in a foster home. Feeling that nobody wants him, the boy has developed a deep antagonism to the world.

Sick and Burdened.

Alma, 13, is the oldest of five children. Ill health has kept her back in school. Because she is given the responsibility for her brothers and sisters, she has few recreational outlets.

Rose, 15, shares Alma's family problem. Her difficulties are increased, however, by the rigid discipline enforced by her immigrant father. She needs a rest from tension.

Thomas Circle Group Protests On Underpass

Possible Avenue Widening Would Impair Property Citizens Say.

The authorized Thomas Circle underpass yesterday drew protests from a civic delegation that called upon the District Commissioners and asked either that the whole project be delayed until Congress convenes or that Massachusetts avenue be run through the park area on the surface.

The Commissioners, who have $530,000 for the project, said the petition will be considered before further action is taken.

District engineers who are drafting plans for the subway said it might be necessary to widen Massachusetts avenue 42 feet between Thirteenth street and a point half way between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets.

This expansion would be required to allow the underpass four lanes of traffic and the side driveways via the circle two lanes each, it was said.

Members of the civic delegation complained that such treatment would necessitate the cutting down of more than 100 shade trees and that it would impair property values.

The delegation comprised:

A. J. Driscoll, president of the Mid-City Citizens Association; Eugene J. Butler and Charles A. McMahon, of the National Catholic Welfare Conference; Frank B. Hoffman, chairman of a special committee representing property owners; Mrs. W. J. Flood, of 1322 Massachusetts avenue, and Mrs. Emily Chapman, of 1327 Massachusetts avenue. Funds for the Thomas Circle underpass were placed in the 1939 District supply act by Chairman Thomas of the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations.

Officials Map Fight to Keep Business Tax

Seal Says District Will Take Invalidation to Supreme Court.

The District Commissioners yesterday decided to fight to the last ditch the District Grocery Stores suit over the business privilege tax as officials wondered what effect Justice Jennings Bailey's opinion may have on the current District tax investigation.

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal said that the District will go to trial on the case and fight it, if necessary, through the Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court.

The Commissioners meanwhile were assured by Auditor Daniel J. Donovan that there is no immediate threat of a loss of municipal revenue as a result of Justice Bailey's ruling that the District has no right to tax interstate commerce.

The pending litigation, which concerns only last year's tax act, may consume a year or more, and other concerns that hope to collect refunds on similar business will have to file suits as well and they can do so only if they made formal protests when they paid their taxes.

District officials believe that the collection of business taxes on interstate commerce this year will not be subject to the same challenge as was last year's act because of the provision for apportioning the business done within the District and taxing only that.

The United States Supreme Court already has upheld the right of a State to impose a similar tax.

Meanwhile, District officials are wondering whether the ruling of Bailey that Congress acts somewhat as a State Legislature in legislating for the District would invalidate a local income tax that covered Federal salaries.

They make it clear that an income tax that exempted Federal workers would be inequitable and not very productive in the National Capital.

Boy, 19, Is Jailed For Attempting To Extort $35

A 19-year-old boy was held at the First Precinct Station without charge last night after he had allegedly attempted to extort $35 from Mrs. Lillian M. Rector, manager of Tribby's Jewelry Store at 619 Seventh street northwest.

Mrs. Rector, who described the boy as "clean-cut," said he came into her store yesterday and handed her a note which said:

"You and your brat are both being watched so one false move and there will be a funeral in a few days. Put $35 in this envelope and put this letter with it or you and your store will be demolished. Put your hand on a telephone and an innocent boy will be dead . . ."

After reading the note Mrs. Rector walked with the youth to the door and hailed a patrolman. The boy said he had been given the note by three strangers whom he had met at Fourteenth and K streets northwest. The note was signed "Ace."

Mrs. Rector has no young children.

Cellar-Dwelling Browns, Outhit, Beat Nats, 9 to 7

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The three good men and true of the District Boxing Commission, which thus far has conducted its affairs with a commendable sort of dignity, seem to be lending themselves with surprising fervor to the mild humbug known as the featherweight elimination tournament being conducted by the Messrs. Goldie Ahearn and Joe Turner.

POVICH.

With its succession of decrees following the Tony Dupre-Pete Scalzo affair at Griffith Stadium the other night, the commission has been treating the affair as if it were a tremendous issue instead of the teapot tempest that it is.

On the basis of what they saw out at the stadium the other night, Washington fight fans would be doubtless grateful if they never saw any more of either Scalzo or Dupre who succeeded only in eliminating themselves from even the faintest championship consideration. Yet the commission, citing four points, has recommended that they be rematched.

The entire featherweight elimination tournament with which the commission is concerning itself, is something of a hoax to start with. It is supposed to have the sanction of the National Boxing Association, familiarly known as the N. B. A., but echo answers "So What?"

The District commission, the N. B. A., Messrs. Ahearn and Turner and Washington fight fans are kidding themselves if they think that the local Elimination Tournament is going to have any effect on the National Featherweight scene.

In the first place, the featherweight division is already tenanted by a genuine champion by the name of Henry Armstrong who is perhaps the greatest fighter for his weight and inches in modern ring history. It is folly to think that Armstrong will meet the winner of the local Elimination Tournament, no matter who that winner might be.

Jacobs to Pick Foe.

Armstrong will fight the man he chooses to fight without regard to the N. B. A. or the local commission. Or, rather, he will fight the man whom Mike Jacobs picks for him as a challenger because it is the New York promoter who now has Armstrong under contract and reserves the right to choose his challengers.

In the case of the tournament here, the District commission's affiliation with the National Boxing Association. means exactly nothing. That is a high-sounding name, National Boxing Association, but it has very little standing when championship matches are made. The N. B. A. is never consulted by Mike Jacobs, who directs the activities of the feather, lightweight, welterweight and heavyweight divisions, which are the only classes in which the champions are making any money.

What will happen if Armstrong refuses to fight the man named as challenger by the National Boxing Association? Exactly nothing, except that Armstrong will doubtless be suspended by the N. B. A., which still would amount to nothing having happened.

The N. B. A. could suspend Armstrong in the 42 States in which it has affiliations, but that would hardly affect Armstrong's earnings. Championship matches are rarely held outside of New York, and Illinois which do not recognize the N. B. A.

But the N. B. A. does nevertheless render a service to the District commission. For the very reason that the bulk of the fighters seen in Washington rings are the fighters who can't get profitable bout in New York and Illinois, but must fight in territories under N. B. A. sway, the threat of an N. B. A. suspension is not to be taken lightly.

Can Crack Down.

Thus the District commission can crack down on the type of fighters who appear in Washington and enforce its rules because of its N. B. A. alliance. However, as we were saying, the champions and the top-ranking challengers who can get fights in New York and Chicago have discovered that they can tell the N. B. A. to take a running jump in the lake without fear of reprisals.

Those four points on which the District commission ordered a rematch of Dupre and Scalzo were laughable in three respects. The points made for a rematch were, as we remember them (1) the fact that the fighters fought in the rain, (2) the fact that the fight was scheduled for only eight rounds, (3) the fact that it ended in a split decision, and (4) the statement that three of the five local newspapers disagreed with the decision.

The fight was certainly fought in the rain, and the commission is eminently correct on that score. But as far as the other points are concerned, this is a late date for the commission to discover that the fight was scheduled for only eight rounds; split decisions are frequent occurrences, and how long since the commission has been preferring the opinions of newspaper fight writers over those of its own judges and referees?

Woody English Retired by Landis

Chicago, July 22 (AP).—Elwood (Woody) English, utility infielder traded by Brooklyn to Cincinnati, today was placed on the retired list by Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball.

English, who left the Dodgers because of his inactivity, refused to join Cincinnati, although offered a $1,000 bonus. He is honeymooning in northern Wisconsin and does not intend to return to the game until next season.

Griffs' Bats Stilled With Men Aboard

Lewis Hits Homer Over Fence; 2 Errors by Locals Costly.

By Shirley Povich.

Amid the sound and the fury of Ladies' Day, the Nats' three-game winning streak perished yesterday. There was evidence of both murder and suicide. The Nats' pitching was violently clubbed, and their fielding was a baseball version of hari kari. The upshot of it all was a 9-7 victory for the eighth-place St. Louis Browns, of all people.

Mr. Griffith's athletes outhit the Browns, 13 to 11, but they were unable to slug runs across the plate at the same pace that the Washington pitching, with the assistance of the Washington infield, was letting runs score.

Rained out for five consecutive days, their rest cure worked a mild sort of wonder for the lowly Browns. They rose wrathfully in the fourth inning, scored four runs against Harry Kelley and knocked him out of the box in the fifth. They greeted Joe Krakauskas with a run in the sixth, and against Pete Appleton in the ninth all they did was to score two more runs and win the ball game.

Lewis Shines at Bat.

At one point, in the sixth inning, the Browns had a commanding 7-1 lead, thanks in a measure to a pair of gift runs presented them by the magnanimous actions of Buddy Lewis and Ossie Bluege in the fifth inning. Lewis kindly muffed a grounder off McQuillan's bat and Bluege contributed a nice, timely throw to nobody in particular.

But Lewis hardly could be held responsible for the Nats' ultimate defeat. He was wielding a potent bat all afternoon and collected four of the Nats' 13 hits, including a home run over the rightfield wall, a pair of two-baggers and a well-tagged single.

Two runs scored by the Browns against Appleton in the ninth loomed unimportant at the time, what with the Gas Meter Gang—so-called because they have virtually been living in the American League cellar for years—enjoying a 9-5 lead. But when the Nats came up with two runs in their own half of the ninth, those two tallies surrendered by Appleton proved to be the winning runs.

Rally Falls Short.

The 10,000 ladies' day customers began to vision another of the Nats' famous rallies in the ninth when George Case singled and Buddy Lewis scored him with a double to right center before anybody was out. But from that point the Nats went into a sharp decline.

Sammy West grounded to Red Kress for the first out of the inning and then Kress choked off the whoops of the customers by dashing far toward second base and cutting off Al Simmons' bid for a hit. Lewis scored on the play. Faint hope was stirred when Buddy Myer looped a single into left field, but Zeke Bonura, swinging from his heels for the home run that would tie the score, succeeded only in lifting a long fly to McQuillan against the leftfield fence.

Boots Poffenberger Explains Act; Is Ready to Face Music

Wayward Tiger Hurler Balks at Idea of Going to Minors; Would Quit Game First.

By the Associated Press.

Williamsport, Md., July 22.—Cletus Elwood Poffenberger, suspended Tiger pitcher, said today he would go to Detroit Monday to "see what it's all about and get what's coming to me."

And, he added, "I expect hell."

Obviously perturbed at the suspension, of which he was notified by telegraph today, Poffenberger said he only came home to Williamsport instead of going to Detroit as ordered because he wanted to escape public attention.

He expects to take whatever comes on his return to Detroit, because, he observed, "I can't make a living hanging around here."

The troubled pitcher came home yesterday after vanishing from Washington when Manager Mickey Cochrane ordered him back to Detroit. He turned down a railroad ticket to Detroit offered by Arthur T. Sheahan, club secretary. Cochrane said Poffenberger had not been observing training rules closely and said he would decide "what we're going to do" with him after talking to Boots.

The returning home-town-boy-who-made-good found lots of admiring friends in this small town. To them he vowed: "I'll never go back to the minor leagues. The salary I'm getting now is not enough. I'd sooner give up baseball.

"The club is not going so good now, and I guess Mickey had to have someone to blame it on—but I'm not sore. I guess I deserved it."

He said he would leave for Detroit Monday to "get the lowdown."

"I had been kidding the boys about a week's vacation to go fishing, and now I have it without asking," he said.

Charlie Grimm Glad Of Chance to Relax

St. Louis, July 22 (AP).—Charlie Grimm, deposed manager of the Chicago Cubs, was back today on his farm at Gray's Summit, Mo., with no immediate plans, except for taking a long rest far from the madding baseball crowds.

"For 22 years I haven't had much chance to take things easy and I welcome the present one," Grimm said. "I haven't thought of making another baseball connection and I am not going to do anything about such a move for the present."

Grimm added that he would come to St. Louis now and then to see some games "for, after all, baseball has been the big thing in my life and I'm not going to stay away from it whether or not I become active in it again."

Barton, Ross Off British Cup Team

New York, July 22 (AP).—Neither Pam Barton nor Mrs. Marjorie Ross Garon will accompany the British Curtis Cup golf team to this country, the United States Golf Association was informed today.

Replacing them on the team which plays the United States September 7-8 at the Essex Country Club, Manchester, Mass., will be Nan Baird and Phyllis Wade.

Several members of the invading squad are expected to compete in the United States women's championship starting at the Westmoreland Country Club, Wilmette, Ill., September 19.

Storm 'Kills' Golf Scores At Olympia

Oak Park Pro Victim of Ruling; He Had a Brilliant 67.

By the United Press.

Chicago Heights, Ill., July 22.—A severe electric storm swept over Olympia Fields Country Club late today, forcing officials of the $5,000 Chicago Open Golf Tournament to erase all first-round scores and turn the contest into a 54-hole event.

Heavy rains hampered play all afternoon, but near dusk, with less than one-fourth the field still on the course, the storm struck in full. Tournament officials gathered hastily and agreed play could not be resumed until tomorrow's 18-hole round. Final 36 holes were scheduled Sunday.

Ernest (Dutch) Harrison, young Oak Park, Ill., professional, who never had much luck competing against the big fellows, saw his sizzling round of 67 washed away. Others hurt by the ruling were Willie Goggin, San Bruno, Calif., veteran and Bill Heinlein, of Indianapolis, who had whipped par by one stroke with 69 for runner-up position on the first round of the first rich stake of the Midwestern season.

Back of Harrison, Heinlein and Goggin were National Open Champion Ralph Guldahl, Braidburn, N. J.; Johnny Revolta, Evanston, Ill.; Harry Todd, Dallas, Tex.; Horton Smith, Oak Park, Ill., and Johnny Bulla, of Downers Grove, Ill., all with excellent 70's. All but Todd are professionals.

Cards Swamp Dodgers, 12-3

Score 9 Runs in First 2 Innings to Win.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 22.—The Cardinals went on their biggest run-making spree since June 2 today and cooled off those red hot Brooklyn Dodgers with a 12-to-3 victory, behind the seven-hit pitching of Lon Warneke.

They scored six runs in the first inning, sparked by Ducky Medwick's triple with the bases loaded and homers by Johnny Mize and Herb Bremer, and added three more in the second. Don Padgett also hit a homer, in the eighth inning.

Medwick, with a triple, double and single and five runs batted in; Mize, with a homer, triple and single and three runs batted in, and Padgett, with a homer, double and single, paced the Cards' 15-hit attack off Tot Pressnell and Max Butcher.

Tony Galento (in fighting attire) poses with Jack Dempsey when the former world champion assumed command of "Two Tap's" fistic future. Dempsey later turned Tony adrift, and the good-natured Italian heavyweight went on to win the No. 1 challenger's ranking. He was stricken yesterday with pneumonia, and his bout with John Henry Lewis, scheduled next Tuesday has been cancelled.

Rawls, Hopkins Are Victors As National Swim Meet Opens

Former Cracks 300-Yard Medley Record; Hopkins Defeats Ryan in Century.

By the Associated Press.

Santa Barbara, Calif., July 22.—Red-haired Virginia Hopkins started the women's national aquatic meet off auspiciously today by capturing the hotly contested 100-meter swim in a close finish with Elizabeth Ryan, of New York, the defending champion.

Taking a lead at the half-way point, the 16-year-old Los Angeles girl won by scant inches from Miss Ryan in 1 minute 10.5 seconds.

Esther Williams, teammate of Miss Hopkins at the Los Angeles Athletic Club, was third in the field of seven contenders.

A crowd of 1,200 spectators turned out for the opening of the three-day meet, staged by the American Amateur Athletic Union.

Cracking the world record she set up five years ago today, Katherine Rawls Thompson, of Florida, won the 300-meter individual medley swim in 4 minutes 33.1 seconds. The old mark set at New York, was 4 minutes 35.6 seconds. She won the event last year.

Helen Rains, of New York, was second, 25 feet back of Mrs. Thompson, with Ann Hardin, of Louisville, Ky., third, and Harriet Warre, Santa Monica, third.

100-meter free style—Won by Virginia Hopkins, Los Angeles A. C.; second, Elizabeth Ryan, Woman's Swimming Association, New York; third, Esther Williams, Los Angeles A. C.; fourth, Betty Lea, Washington A. C., Seattle. Time, 1 minute, 10.5 seconds.

George von Metaxa, former Austrian star, followed up by defeating Bernard Destremeau, 6—4, 7—5, 5—7, 5—7, 6—3, to give Germany a 2-0 lead with three matches left to play.

Richmond Legion Post Wins Way to Baseball Finals

Alexandria, Va., July 22 (AP).—Richmond Post No. 1 won its way into the Eastern finals of the annual American Legion State baseball tournament today by taking both ends of a double-header from Alexandria Post No. 24.

The visitors batted out a 26-to-5 victory in the first game, while in the nightcap, called at the end of the sixth inning on account of darkness, they nosed out Alexandria, 3 to 1.

Russell Williams, Richmond pitcher who lost a heart-breaking decision to the Alexandrians yesterday, was credited with both victories.

He pitched the first three innings of the first game, retiring after his mates had pounded out a 9-to-2 lead, and turned in a two-hit performance in the abbreviated second game.

7-Up to Play Two Games.

The Seven-Up Athletic Club nine will oppose Staunton on the latter's field tonight at 8:30, and tomorrow at 3 p. m. they meet Waynesboro.

Heavyweight Is Placed in Oxygen Tent

Doctor Describes Him as 'Very Sick Man;' Fever at 104.4.

By the United Press.

Orange, N. J., July 22.—Tony Galento, the National Boxing Association's No. 1 heavyweight challenger, was brought to the Orange Memorial Hospital tonight suffering from pneumonia. His illness caused cancellation of his bout with Light-heavyweight Champion John Henry Lewis at Philadelphia next Tuesday night.

Galento was placed in an oxygen tent. His temperature was 104.4 and his pulse 120. He first became ill last night at his home in Orange, after training yesterday at Madame Bey's Camp, Summit, N. J. He remained in bed at home all day today, and was taken to the hospital in an ambulance tonight.

Before going to the hospital, Galento was examined by Dr. Joseph Higi, of Orange, and Dr. L. M. Jacobs, of the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission. Immediately after the examination, Promoter Herman Taylor, of Philadelphia, announced that the Galento-Lewis 15-round bout had been called off.

Dr. Higi described Galento's illness as an "influenza-pneumonia, which may keep him in the hospital from five days to three weeks if he responds properly to treatment. He is a very sick man and probably will not be able to return to the ring for two or three months, at least."

Dr. Higi said Tony's training exertions may have lowered his resistance, although he did not believe that his paring down from 240 pounds to 225 had anything to do with it.

The Galento-Lewis bout originally was scheduled for Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium on July 13, but it was postponed until Tuesday to allow Galento more time to train for the Arizona Negro, who wears the light-heavyweight crown. It was expected to draw a gate of more than $150,000, because both the Orange saloon keeper and Lewis are popular scrappers in Philadelphia.

The illness struck Galento suddenly, because yesterday and the day before he seemed in excellent spirits at Mme. Bey's Camp. Galento and his manager appeared confident of knocking out the light-heavy king, thereby registering Tony's sixth straight kayo within the past year. A victory over Lewis was expected to earn for Galento a big September bout with either Maxie Baer or Champion Joe Louis.

Cochrane May Go Behind Plate To Aid Crippled Tiger Team

Briggs Wires Manager Permission to Play if He Desires.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 22.—Mickey Cochrane, his Detroit Tigers slumped to sixth place after losing seven straight games, may don his catcher's pads again in an attempt to spark the Bengal in a stretch drive.

While the Tigers rested today as the first game of the series with the Athletics at Philadelphia was postponed because of wet grounds, Cochrane received permission from Walter O. Briggs, club owner, to become an active player again if he desires.

Manager Mike has not caught a game since May 25, 1937, when he was struck on the head by a pitched ball at New York and suffered a fractured skull.

The Detroit catching staff is crippled temporarily by a similar mishap to slugging Rudy York, accidentally "beaned" at Washington yesterday. York will be out of the lineup for several days.

If Cochrane expects to take an active hand in the game in an effort to break up the streak of ill-luck pursuing the Tigers, he must apply to the league for reinstatement as an active player before August 1. He now is on the voluntarily retired list.

Early last May, when Cochrane bought two catchers' mitts in Boston and rumors of his possible return was widespread, one writer quoted Mike as saying, "I'll go crazy doing nothing but sitting on the bench all season."

Worsham Rules Favorite in Maryland Open Golf

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer.

(Merrily We Roll Along)

A couple of rather well known football players of last fall are working in our office these days, handling certain details in connection with the All Star-Giants game to be played at the Polo Grounds on the evening of September 7. One is Joe Nee, Harvard guard of the last few campaigns, and the other is Alexander Wojciechowicz, Fordham's famous center. And the boys are having their troubles, especially the great Wojie.

VIDMER.

The other day he was trying to put through a long distance telephone call.

"Business or personal?" asked the operator.

"Business," Wojie replied.

"Who's calling please?"

"Wojciechowicz," replied the young man in all innocence.

"Who?" came the startled response.

"Wojciechowicz. I'm in the sports department."

"How do you spell it?"

"W-o-j-c-i-e-c-h o-w-i-c-z."

"Wait a minute! Try it again, and a little slower, please."

"W-o-j c-i-e c-h-o—oh, never mind. Make it Nee—N-double e."

B. Posener was telling about a couple of friends who, at an advanced age, decided to take up golf. They had been playing pinochle together for years, but they felt they needed more fresh air and exercise. So they went out for their first game, stood on the first tee and looked at each other questioningly.

"Well, what are we going to play for?" one of them asked.

"Anything you say," the other replied.

There followed a brief silence, both trying to figure what sort of stakes would be adequate and yet not too expensive.

"Let's make it the same as usual," one finally suggested. "Five cents a hundred."

* * * *

Tony Galento, who was scheduled to fight John Henry Lewis in Philadelphia next week, and James J. Braddock are both heavyweights and both come from New Jersey. But there the similarity ends. Apparently they don't even speak the same language.

Galento was on the card as a preliminary fighter the night Braddock lost his title to Joe Louis in Chicago last summer. And one of the first persons in Jim's dressing room following his defeat was tough Tony. His face was framed in a frown of dismay as he came storming in and strode across the room to where the beaten Braddock sat, badly pounded about the eyes.

"Dat was terrible, Jim, terrible," said Tony. "I never seen nothing like it. Robbery, dat's what it was. Why them officials out there must be deaf, dumb and blind. It shoulda been the other way around."

Braddock looked up and smiled his appreciation through swollen lips.

Tony's mouth dropped open.

"You'll get another chance? Hey, I'm talkin' about dat decision dey just give Godoy over me. It was plain burglary, dat's what!"

* * * *

Walter Hagen didn't play in the P. G. A. championship at Shawnee last week, but you might have thought he was leading the field to hear so many stories told about him. One was about the time Joe Ezar, the trick-shot artist, was telling Sir Walter all the things he could do with a golf ball. Or three golf balls.

"Look," Ezar was saying. "I put three balls down here like this, see? Then I swing the club like this. And with one stroke, I knock one ball 200 yards in front of me, another 200 yards behind me, and the third ball——"

"Yes, I know that one," Hagen interrupted with a wink. "You knock the third ball 200 yards straight up in the air and leave it hanging there."

* * * *

Last fall Washington became professional football conscious to an enthusiastic degree and the flame of interest was fanned by the imaginative direction of George Preston Marshall, owner of the champion Redskins, at the least possible excuse.

Before the game between the Washington team and the Green Bay Packers, of Wisconsin, Vice President Garner was invited to pass out the first ball and accepted. The moment he entered his special box a corps of camera men rushed over and formed a semicircle before him as the shutters started winking and the reels began to turn. The Vice President stood there smiling, waving and posing graciously and didn't notice the dignified Bill Crowell, referee for the day, who had strolled up to hand him the ball for the ceremonies.

In fact, as Bill offered the ball, the Vice President waved him aside and continued to bow to the photographers. But eventually they paused in their operation, waiting to get a picture of the celebrated football official handing Mr. Garner the ball.

"All right, son," said the Vice President tolerantly turning to the indignant football dignitary, "and now what can I do for you!"

Blasts a 67 In Practice For Tourney

Field of 75 Expected for Meet; Entries Close Today.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Lewis Worsham jumped into the favorite's role for the Maryland State Open championship next week as he battered Old Man Par with a 67 yesterday over the Congressional Course, scene of the tourney.

The assistant to Bob Barnett at Chevy Chase included a back nine of 30, five shots under par, in his near-record round over the water-soaked layout. Ralph Quinter, jr., Chevy Chase club champion, was his playing partner.

Out in nine consecutive pars for a 37, Worsham followed with a par on ten and bagged his first birdie on the eleventh hole. He parred the short twelfth and snared birdie No. 2 on the thirteenth, parred 14 and 15 and had a sub-par streak of 3-3-3 on the par 4 finishing holes for the 30 and 67.

Entries for the open, to be played Tuesday, close today at noon with Emmet Gary, State Golf Association secretary, at 16 McClellan place, Baltimore.

A field of 75 is expected to battle for the $300 prize money and the various amateur awards. Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam, will face the best golfers in the District and Maryland in the defense of his title, including the host club ace, Wiffy Cox.

Mrs. V. A. Welte and Mrs. M. Johnson tied for the low net award in class B in the Ladies Day sweepstakes event yesterday at Congressional. Mrs. Welte scored 98-12, 86 and Mrs. Johnston 112-26, 86.

Mrs. Alfred C. Paul won the class C prize while low putts went to Mrs. H. A. Knix with 33.

E. B. Collins, Congressional member, aced the par three ninth hole yesterday while playing with Wiffy Cox and Byron Simmons. Collins used a two iron for the perfect shot.

D. C. Public Links Entries Close Today

Entries for the District public links championship, carded next Wednesday and Thursday over the East Potomac course, close today with Tommy Doerer, jr., manager of the host club.

A field of 125 is expected to battle for the title vacated by Claude Rippy and the four places to the national championship in Cleveland as members of the local Harding Cup team.

Mancine to Meet Kroll at Stadium

A lad who might take all of the featherweights who have boxed here in the same ring on the same night and bash their heads together was signed for the semifinal spot on Monday night's boxing card when Al Mancine agreed to meet Augie Kroll over the eight-round route.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn also announced the signing of Armanda Sicilia and George Carlos for another eight. The main bout, involving Al Reid and Paul Lee, is scheduled for a similar distance.

Angelo Puglisi and Rusty Baker are down for six rounds, and Billy Banks will settle an old grudge with Joe Clark in four—if possible.

Chambers and Hawley Reach Tourney Finals

New York, July 22 (U.P.).—Marshall Chambers, of Cincinnati, and E. Blair Hawley, of New York, reached the final round in the Eastern boys singles tennis championship tournament today.

Chambers, seeded No. 1 in the draw, defeated Richard Cooley, of New York, 6—2, 6—4. Hawley turned back Scott Stickle, of Snort Hills, N. J., 7—5, 7—5. Both matches were played indoors at the River Club instead of at Forest Hills because of rain.

Chambers and Hawley will meet for the title tomorrow.

Red Bank, N. J., July 22.—Crack oarsmen from the United States and Canada drilled in heavy rain today in preparation for the National Rowing championships—first to be held in the metropolitan area since 1900—tomorrow and Saturday over the picturesque North Shrewsbury River.

Six days of steady rain have made the usually speedy water course "heavy," and officials predicted there would be little if any record breaking despite the top-notch field of entrants.

Theodore J. Van Twisk, of New York, chairman of the regatta committee, said the events have drawn a total entry of 57, 13 more than the previous high mark of a national title joust. The entries included 22 single sculls, 9 double sculls, 14 four-oared shells and 12 eight-oared shells, with the total number of contestants totaling close to 350 men.

One of the feature events of the two-day meet will be a parade of former champions, headed by Joe Burk, of Bridgeboro, N. J., recent winner of the diamond sculls in the British Henley Regatta. Franklin H. Bates, secretary of the rowing committee, said he expected all national single sculls titleholders since 1902 to take part in the exhibition.

A special race for octuple shells (boats carrying eight men and 16 oars) will bring together the Princeton University Rowing Association and crews from the New York A. C. and the Penn A. C. of Philadelphia.

Senior and intermediate championships will be decided for quarter-mile single sculls, double sculls, quadruple sculls and four-oared and eight-oared boats. In addition to the special octuple race there will be an event for scholastic eights.

Vic Carroll Signs Redskin Contract

Vic Carroll, strapping utility line man who played at both guard and tackle last year, has forwarded his signed contract to the Washington Redskins for the 1938 season, it was announced yesterday. Carroll is the thirty-first Redskin player to sign.

Col. E. R. Bradley Hobbles to Races

New York, July 22 (AP).—On crutches and with a slipper on one foot, Col. E. R. Bradley, famed race horse owner of Lexington, Ky., went back to the races today.

He had recovered sufficiently from several months illness with a bloodclot on the brain to travel to Saratoga, N. Y., to witness the opening of the track season there next Monday. He left his Garden City hotel in his limousine.

Bosox Beat Indians, 7-4

Feller Fails to Halt Sox; Yanked in Fourth.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 22.—The Red Sox found Bobby Feller no mystery today and whipped the Cleveland Indians, 7 to 4, dropping the Tribe a full game behind the leading Yankees.

By losing, the Tribe missed an opportunity to go into a first-place tie, since the Yanks were rained out for the third straight day. The victory boosted the third-place Red Sox to within a game and a half of the Indians.

Jackie Wilson's effective pitching and the timely hitting of Joe Cronin and Pinky Higgins, each of whom drove in three runs, featured the Red Sox vcictory.

The Red Sox got to Feller for three runs in the third inning to take a lead they never gave up and hang the fifth defeat of the year on young Bobby.

A run in the first on two hits and Hal Trosky's twelfth homer of the year in the second sent the Indians away in front. But the Red Sox, after scoring in the opening frame, landed on Feller in the third, with Higgins' double driving in two runs and Bobby Doerr's two-bagger producing the third.

Feller was lifted for a pinch hitter in the fourth, and Denny Galehouse, who relieved him, gave up a run in the sixth on Cronin's long fly. Young Johnny Humphries took over in the eighth and was promptly tagged for the final two Sox markers, one coming across on a walk with the bases loaded and the other scoring on Higgins' neatly placed bunt.

Reds Divide With Phillies

Win 1st, 5-2; Outslugged in Nightcap, 11-10.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, July 22.—The trouble-making Phillies dropped one ordinary ball game to the Cincinnati Reds today, 5 to 2, but came back in the nightcap to batter five Red pitchers for an 11-to-10 victory despite a seven-run Red rally in the eighth.

Home runs by Berger, Goodman and Lombardi featured the opener, which was Paul Derringer's twelfth victory of the year. Goodman's circuit smash was his twenty-fifth and Lombardi's his twelfth.

The Reds got a two-run start, including a homer by McCormick, in the first inning of the nightcap, but the Phillies scored in each of the first six frames, three times in the fourth, accounting for all their runs except one in the eighth.

Allison Quits Net Tourney At Brookline

Refuses to Play Indoors as Rains Mar Play; Riggs Winner.

By the Associated Press.

Brookline, Mass., July 22.—Wide holes were shot in the seeded list of the Longwood Bowl tennis tournament today when rain, for the fifth consecutive day, forced the men's field to shuttle between two widely separated covered courts to reduce itself to the quarterfinals.

Top-seeded Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., last year's winner, never at his best indoors, had trouble defeating a lightly regarded opponent, Henry Kulick, of Salem, 6—4, 7—5, in the second round, and then defaulted his third-round match to Chester Murphy, one of the Chicago twins, when he learned he would have to play another indoors match.

Charles Hare, the former British Davis Cup player, eliminated the sixth-seeded Gardner Mulloy, of Miami, 2—6, 6—1, 10—8, in the tourney's most exciting match, and Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., who complained of a stomach ailment, ignored his discomfort long enough to register a surprising 6—4, 6—3 victory over eighth-seeded Bobby Harman, of Oakland, Calif.

Bobby Riggs Wins.

The outstanding favorite, Bobby Riggs, the Nation's No. 2 player, now residing in Chicago, defeated Archie Henderson, rangy Chapel Hill, N. C., collegian, in a magnificent third-round battle, 8—10, 6—2, 9—7.

Three other seeded players romped into the quarterfinals, Hal Surface, of Kansas City, No. 4, by defeating Dave Burt, of Old Lyme, Conn., 6—3, 6—2; Sydney Wood, of Berkeley Hills, Calif., No. 5, by eliminating Guibord, of Melrose, 6—2, 6—3, and Frank Kovacs, Oakland, Calif., the No. 7, by ousting William Murphy, the other Chicago twin, 6—4, 6—4.

Two brothers, John and Charles Shostrom, of Chicago, clashed in the remaining third-rounder, with the former moving against Hare with a 6—3, 6—3 verdict.

Women Advance.

Mulloy bowed out after he had piled up five match points against the blazing Hare, who won many a rash gamble by fire-balling in the clutches.

The spectacular Riggs, playing on his favorite clay surface—he has won the last three national championships in that division—was on top of his brilliant game every stroke against Henderson, who turned in the best tennis of his career.

Meanwhile, the much smaller women's field, based at the Badminton and Tennis Club in Boston, completed two rounds to determine the semifinalists, Virginia Hollinger, of Dayton, Ohio; Helen Bernhard, New York; Dorothy Workman, of Los Angeles, and Virginia Wolfenden, of San Francisco.

That section was disorganized when the original top-seeded player, Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., withdrew, as did the two who were promoted to succeed her, Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of New York, and Katherine Winthrop, of Boston.

Men's Third-Round Singles.

Elwood Cooke, Portland, Oreg., defeated Bobby Harman, Oakland, Calif., 6—3, 6—2.

Women's Quarter-finals Singles.

Miss Hollinger defeated Miss Morgain, 6—2, 6—4.

Miss Workman defeated Miss Raymond, 6—0, 6—2.

Miss Wolfenden, defeated Miss Dean, 6—2, 8—6.

Miss Bernhard defeated Mrs. Nakano, 6—4, 6—2.

closed that the move to clear the way for his return to the game came from Mickey himself.

"You know my idea in keeping you from playing was for your own good," Briggs wired Mike. "Before deciding definitely I would want you to consider the matter seriously and after you have done so your judgment will prevail."

Discipline Pitcher.

The club acted today to discipline Cletus (Boots) Poffenberger, pitcher who was ordered back to Detroit by Cochrane after a brief appearance on the mound in Washington.

Poffenberger was suspended indefinitely. At his home in Williamsport, Md., Poffenberger said he would return to Detroit Monday to "get what's coming to me," and added that "I expect hell."

He was obviously perturbed by the suspension. Cochrane, in ordering him to Detroit, criticized the pitcher for failure to cover first base on a deep grounder to Greenberg in a game at Washington.

Miller Backs N.B.A. Stand On Bout Here

Says Scalzo-Dupre Decision Will Be Noted in Next Ratings.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

The virile blood of the old Leatherneck in Col. Heinrich Miller boiled to an uncomfortably hot temperature yesterday at the mention of the names of Pete Scalzo and Tony Dupre.

"Scalzo and Dupre!" he bellowed, "Scalzo and Dupre, that's all I hear. They get in my hair, they get in my coffee, they even have me talking in my sleep. I'll put a finish to this."

And with a loud, salty snort that almost swept petite "Jo" Sawaya, his secretary, off her chair, the colonel sat himself down and pecked out the following piece, to wit:

"The N. B. A. quarterly ratings take cognizance of ANY bouts in ANY class in ANY place for ANY number of rounds. (And please don't leave out the caps, Mr. Printer.) In the ratings or considerations for the ratings the winners move up and the losers move down. Thus, ANY bout between 126-pounders is, in effect, an elimination contest.

"The N. B. A. never has and does not intend to say Washington, D. C. has "THE" N. B. A. featherweight tourney or even "A" featherweight tourney and that the contenders in the final featherweight titular match must come from the Washington, D. C. tourney. The N. B. A. is a national body and is concerned abouts bouts any place.

"The N. B. A. feels that if a tournament is labeled as "THE" N. B. A. tournament the management and matchmaking for the tourney and the say as to who is in that tourney should rest with the N. B. A. In other words, the N. B. A. name should not be specifically tacked onto any one bout or series of bouts unless the N. B. A. has something to say about it. If its label is on the bottle it wants to know what is in the bottle.

"The N. B. A.'s ratings committee probably will recognize Dupre's win over Scalzo. If Scalzo reverses it before the next ratings that, too, will be recognized, as will the result of the Reid-Lee match.

"If, for instance, Bill Jones, rated in the first ten, is knocked out by some unknown out in the sticks, that, too, will affect the ratings. When two outstanding national contenders have been established, recognized as the final two contenders for the title, any bout is an elimination bout.

"The N. B. A.'s ratings, on which any titular claim is based, are so closely related with "eliminations" that it does not make sense to separate them or to insist upon a special N. B. A. label on any tournament.

"The N. B. A. is carefully watching the Washington tourney. In the next ratings the winners will be moved up and the losers down.

"Mr. Foster has just returned from the International Boxing Conference at Rome, Italy, and the sense of that conference was that title fights should be for not less than 15 rounds and eliminations not less than 10. However, there are States (California for one, Pennsylvania another) where bouts over 10 rounds are

Victor Pays A $6 Mutuel In Slow Race

Jockey Everson Pilots Winner; Late Drive Takes Event.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Fair Grounds, Hagerstown, Md., July 22.—W. E. Johnson's Golden Key and Apprentice Jockey B. Everson proved the right combination in the Sharpsburg Purse, the outstanding race on today's program.

With the boy whipping and the gelding driving, the son of Jean Valjean came up in the stretch to put over a half-length defeat on Timber Storm. Rise and Shine was third in the field of eight going over the Mason-Dixon course of 150 feet less than 5½ furlongs.

Golden Key was the favorite at a $6 mutuel and was clocked in 1:07 3-5 over a track that was slow as the result of rain last night.

Timber Storm was first to show in front and opened a good lead to draw out. With Jockey Atkinson pumping, Timber Storm set a strong pace. However, Everson put Golden Key to a drive and the gelding wore down his rival in the stretch run.

In collaring the pacemaker, Golden Key bore in and Jockey Atkinson made a futile claim of foul. Rise and Shine, well backed, lost her chance when she stumbled badly and all but unseated Jockey Leon Garrett. When out of trouble Rise and Shine closed with a rush.

Double Pays $141.20.

Janstar and Prince Khayyam, a pair of platers which have been trying to take down a purse all year, picked today to do their respective stuff and won the first and second races to produce a $141.20 pay-off in the daily double. Jockey Leon Garrett came from far back to win with Janstar over maidens, and Jockey J. Atkinson, who has been restored to good standing, booted Prince Khayyam at a $20.40 mutuel.

Running Water, 10-year-old son of Cherokee, brought joy to his scattered backers by driving to a halflength victory in the third race. The ancient gelding defeated, among others, Blond Reel and Philigal, to pay $30.90.

Penway, with Sammy Palumbo in the saddle, made good for the favorite players in the fifth race, winning from Gay Lass and Dunair. Tuleyries Star set the early pace but faded when Penway went to the top. Palumbo was forced to keep Penway to a light drive in the stretch to stave off the bid of Gay Lass. Penway was a $4.20 favorite.

Selections at Hagerstown.

Dear Al:

With a good program scheduled, topped by the Hancock Handicap, racing at this point closes with the week-end card. After ten days of bangtail banging, Hagerstown closes its gates until next year. Jockeys and horses will have until Wednesday to move to the Bel Air track, the other side of Baltimore, where the show will go on. While Hagerstown's session started like a lamb, it has gained momentum and it will take a mighty poor Saturday to keep the track from showing a good profit. Harold Bester and the other boys have worked hard at the Fair Grounds track and deserve a break. Bel Air will offer the first steeplechase racing of the year in Maryland, due to the fact that Pimlico cut down the infield and was forced to shun the jumpers. Greg Johnson, publicity director, reports that Little Woman, Caniento and Round Bend, the latter holder of the track record, are among the 30 timber toppers on the grounds. Post time at Bel Air is 2 o'clock, with eight races daily. The daily double will be on the first and second with the steeplechase going as the third race each day. James Wolfe, who pinch hit for William Harron here, will be in the stewards stand at Bel Air. Harron, who represents the Maryland Racing Commission, is taking a vacation at his home at Broom Island, Md. William H. Gordon, jr., Democratic candidate for Governor of Maryland, was a visitor today. I'm going to take a vacation, folks, whether or not I've earned it. Clocker Mike is going to try to keep the home fires burning. Give him a chance.

BILL.

First race—Nancy Reed turned on the heat in somewhat similar company here and seems well suited despite the top weight assignment. Howellville flashed some of the form he showed me at Delaware Park in that last and I expect him to be prominent. Adhelmar comes from Wheeling and is well recommended.

Second race — Miss Symphony probably will have Palumbo in the saddle and seems ready for one of these front-running efforts that mean a purse. Tell It and Justa Jimmie are heavily weighted, but dangerous.

Third race — Green Water is in light and should have won the last. With better handing, I expect this one to score. Deginard seems capable of handling the 119 pounds in this and is due respect. Lula Khayyam might take it all, but is a doubtful starter.

Fourth race—Kitty's Rival, good performer during the recent Wheeling meeting, will do a lot of stepping in this field and may take the measure of Small Chance. The latter is at tops and plenty dangerous. Small Devil likes the track and should be close.

Fifth race—Lady's Favor won in a common gallop last out over virtually the same kind. Should repeat in this field. Match Point has the early speed of the party and promises to be a stretch factor. Idylle could awake here. Wise Revue is a possible surprise.

Sixth race—Itsie Bitsie should get to the front of these and may forget to stop Miss Epe and Spotless to hold the others safe.

Seventh race—Cartour turned in a fine effort last out and seems headed for that long-awaited victory in this field. Stingaree is fit and ready. Sun Voter moves up if the track is off.

Eighth race—Silver Arch, Cats Cradle and Look Forward is the way I prefer the min the substitute race.

Best bet—Lady's Favor.

Cotton Yields South but 30% Of Farm Cash

Effect of Short Crop Will Be Offset by Expansion of Other Products.

New York, July 22.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co. says today:

"While the expected sub-normal cotton crop and the low prices it will bring are obviously adverse influences on trade in the South, cotton is not so dominant in the economy of the South as many believe, and the blow will not be serious to the South as a whole.

"In some areas of the South, however, cotton is, indeed, the dominating influence, and business prospects in those regions are not bright. The only States which should be hit relatively hard are Arkansas and Louisiana.

"Of all the income derived from farming in the nine Southern States which raise most of the Nation's cotton, the latter represents only about 30 per cent of the total. In every one of these States, milk is an important item in providing farm cash, and, in addition, there is the large cash income that arises from the sale of other products, such as tobacco, rice, sugar cane, wheat, corn, peanuts, fruits, vegetables and livestock.

"Even if cotton were the whole of agriculture in the South it would still be far from a dominating influence. The fact is that in every one of the nine Southern cotton States, the value of manufactured products exceeds the value of farm products. The South can no longer be regarded as essentially an agrarian region.

Texas and North Carolina.

"North Carolina, for example, is regarded as one of the nine major cotton-producing States, but the textile fiber is relatively unimportant there. The income from cotton is only about 17 per cent of all farm income, and the tobacco crop alone brings a cash return more than three times that obtained from cotton.

"The manufacture of cigarettes and textile produces the bulk of income in North Carolina, and the value of these products completely overshadows the value of cotton. In relation to the value of manufactured, agricultural and mineral products produced in that State, cotton ranks very low—less than 3 per cent.

"Texas is by far the largest cotton-producing State in the Nation. But Texas is also a leading center in oil refining, has an extensive meat-packing trade, many flour mills, a number of plants for crushing oil seeds, and a myriad of miscellaneous manufactures. The value of all its manufactures is double the value of its agricultural production."

599th Dividend.

Boston, July 22.—A dividend of 20 per cent, payable on all policies expiring during the period September 1 to September 30, 1938, has been declared by the American Mutual Liability Insurance Co. This is American Mutual's 599th consecutive dividend of 20 per cent or more.

Copper Raised To 9⅞ Cents

New York, July 22 (AP).—leading sellers of copper raised the price of the metal for delivery in this country to 9⅞ cents a pound today, up ⅛ cent to the highest quoted since last January.

It was the third increase in the price this month, following a brisk revival of demand in June. The rise started from 9 cents at the end of June. Preceding the hike in the domestic price, the export quotation had risen above 10 cents.

"Fairly good demand" was reported in trade circles, with sales at the new price. Fabricators began to adjust prices of their products to meet the advance in the raw material.

Some speculation for higher prices was seen at work in the copper market. The main force behind the buying, however, was rated in trade quarters the recent industrial upturn and expectations of a widening of business revival.

Frank Calls His Pay Hopelessly Inadequate

By the Associated Press.

Jerome N. Frank urged the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday to increase the $16,000 sum it recently approved as final payment for his services in connection with the Missouri Pacific Railroad reorganization proceedings. Frank, now a member of the Securities Commission, had received $16,000 previously. The ICC, in an order July 8, made an additional $16,000 as final allowance. In a petition filed today Frank said the compensation was based on $10 an hour, which he called "hopelessly inadequate."

Frank said a minimum partial allowance for the two-year period ended December, 1937, should be at least $13 an hour. This would result in total allowances of $41,821, instead of $32,000, he said.

Wheat Prices Decline After 1¼-Cent Rise

July Liquidation and Fading Threat of Far East War Are Factors.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 22.—Reports indicating lessened danger of Russo-Japanese armed clashes did much late today to cause reactions that virtually wiped out 1¼ cents wheat price gains.

Month-end liquidating sales of July delivery of wheat served also at the last as a weight on values. Today was the final day for settlement of July future contracts except by handing over warehouse receipts for the actual grain.

Stimulating influences that led to transient upturns of values included not only Russo-Japanese war threats but also export purchases of 1,000,000 bushels of United States wheat, together with adverse crop reports from Canada.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅝ higher compared with yesterday's finish. September, 70¼@70⅜; December, 72⅛@72¼. Corn, ¾ off to ¼ up; September, 59@59⅛. Oats varying from 1 cent decline to ⅛ advance; Rye showing ¼ to ¾ setback, and provisions 10 cents drop to a gain of 2 cents.

The Market

By C. Norman Stabler.
A Special Correspondent.

Prices Close Generally Higher Against Profit-Taking and Poor Reports.

New York, July 22.—Fractional price changes, most of them on the up-side, predominated in a stock market affected by numerous cross-currents today. There were, on the one hand, cheerful reports of increased activity in numerous industries, including steel, textile and aeronautical, but the effect which these had upon sentiment were largely offset by profit-taking, failure of the wheat and cotton markets to reflect rising talk of war, and the appearance of further second quarter statements from corporations which made, on the whole, unfavorable comparisons with profit records of a year ago.

Bonds were strong in most sections, with speculative rails sharply higher. European exchanges moved a bit higher in terms of the United States dollar. Wheat canceled most of an early advance predicated on the Russo-Japanese controversy on Manchukuo, ending ⅝ cent off to ⅝ higher. Cotton was down 4 to 5 points.

Stocks at the close of the big board session, while under their best levels of the day, showed good recoveries from the lows. Amusements, under pressure since announcement of the Government's monopoly investigation of the big picture concerns, displayed firmer tendencies. Coppers, which showed the most definite tendency to advance, were, of course, influenced by the fractional mark-up in the domestic price and rising quotations for export metal. Copper cartel sales are said to be very small over the last week or more, but speculative interest in the coppers is very alert to war possibilities and leading shares of the group appear to meet prompt support on any dips.

Steel Common Lower.

Steels took little heed of reports from leading producing centers, including Pittsburgh, that a further rise in operations may be expected next week. U. S. Steel common, in fact, closed a small fraction lower. Small losses also were recorded by Bethlehem, American Rolling Mill, National and Jones & Laughlin preferred. On the other hand, Inland rose a point, National a half point, and Sheet & Tube one-quarter.

Rail equipments and oils were, on the whole, a bit lower in more or less quiet trading. The motors showed a bit of improvement on news that manufacturers are speeding up retooling and other arrangements for bringing out the 1939 models, and that the used-car situation is being satisfactorily adjusted. Some of the utilities turned in good performances, more particularly preferred issues, while chemicals were steady.

Stock exchange volume of 1,222,140 shares was considerably below the average of recent active markets. There were 830 issues traded, 374 ending higher, 261 lower, and 195 unchanged.

The more careful traders, as well as many of Wall street's analysts are currently putting more emphasis on the importance of the international peace situation to economic recovery in the United States.

Rail Bonds in Demand.

Trading characteristic in listed bonds were unchanged today, with speculative issues tending higher while money market bonds were dull. Intermediate and low-priced rail bonds were in fair demand and gains ranged to 3 points. Local tractions and other special groups were less active and less desired. Treasury bonds and best corporate loans held to previous figures. Japanese issues again tumbled in the foreign section. Turnover was $7,820,000, against $10,090,000 the previous day.

The rail bonds recovery was quite pronounced in issues of the New York Central, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Nickel Plate, Katy, B. & O. and similar systems. Good carloadings helped the movement, and aided also some of the default issues. Rail holding company bonds were good, but utility holding issues turned uncertain. Amusement bonds rallied and commodity issues were steady. Local tractions were dull and fractionally lower.

United States Treasury bonds varied only by smallest fractions with gains and losses equally numerous. The guaranteed issues of the Farm and Home corporations also reflected week-ending. United States Steel debentures improved fractionally, and leading industrial and other corporate issues in the money market classification generally were firm.

Japanese bonds fell 1 to 3 points in continuance of the move started when the Russo-Japanese complications became threatening. Italian issues also were soft, while the defaulted German bonds attracted no buyers. Latin-American default issues were dull, for Secretary Hull's note on property expropriations was not encouraging to such issues. Highest grade foreign bonds were steady.

Lewis Decries Tydings Shift To New Deal

Foe 'Discovered' Md. Is Pro-Roosevelt, Claims Senate Aspirant.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 22.—Representative David J. Lewis, New Deal opponent of Senator Millard E. Tydings in Maryland's bitter Senatorial contest, asserted tonight Tydings had "discovered" Maryland was a "Roosevelt-Democratic State" and that "no one who is not a Roosevelt Democrat can long remain in office."

Contending that Tydings, a frequent foe of New Deal legislation, had reversed himself this week, in accord with "shifting political winds," Lewis said in a radio speech the Maryland senior Senator was "famous" in Washington as "one of a little band of anti-New Dealers called the Roosevelt wrecking crew."

Meanwhile, leaders of the Montgomery County Democratic organization are considering adopting a "hands-off" policy in the Senate race, it was reported yesterday.

The Democratic County Congress, last March voted its indorsement of both Tydings and Lewis, but at that time, it was thought that Lewis would seek re-election to the House of Representatives.

Wrecking Crew Cited.

In view of the fact that both candidates have strong supporters within the county organization, Democratic spokesman said they thought it possible that the indorsement of both Tydings and Lewis might be withdrawn, leaving the contest open.

In a speech earlier this week Tydings had said he was not "fighting the President" and had recalled that he campaigned actively for Roosevelt's re-election in 1936. The Senator contended, however, that he believed Congressmen should "each use his individual judgment."

Aim of the "wrecking crew," Lewis said, was "to wreck almost every major measure proposed by the President."

"It is not merely how they vote," he continued, "which is bad enough, but it is their attitude on the floor of the Senate, their constant carping criticism and their co-operation with special big business interests opposing the Administration, which is so unfair.

Recalls Incident.

He recalled that Maryland delegates to the Democratic National Convention in 1936 had difficulty in persuading Mr. Tydings that we should second the nomination of the President of the United States.

"The Democratic delegates were assembled to do honor to one of the greatest, one of the most popular, Presidents in history, a man regarding whose renomination there was no doubt whatsoever, who already had received a tremendous ovation from the thousands of delegates present," he continued.

"And there, in Philadelphia, where the senior Senators and distinguished Representatives of other State delegations were seconding . . . the Maryland delegation was embarrassed—and sorely embarrassed—by the refusal of its senior member to make the seconding speech for Maryland.

Personally Prejudiced.

"Mr. Tydings appeared to be so prejudiced personally against Franklin D. Roosevelt that at first he flatly refused . . . He retired to a penthouse on the roof of an apartment home . . . and it was not until long after midnight that he finally consented to do what was expected of him . . ."

Lewis contended Tydings had "suddenly reversed himself" in the current campaign and "embraced 80 per cent of President Roosevelt's policies, together with the President himself" because he had "discovered that Maryland is a Roosevelt-Democratic State and that "no one who is not a Roosevelt Democrat can long remain in office."

"A right-about-face of this kind is by no means a new thing for my opponent," Lewis contended. Friends persuaded Tydings this week "that he could not win unless he put himself in reverse," he added.

"Now, Millard, you have accused me of being old," the 69-year-old Representative continued, "and a prerogative of age is the right to tender advice to younger men. While I regret that you have not supported the President, and while I would not have ventured into this race if you had, I want to offer you this advice: 'There is no moral strength without consistency.'

"We cannot reverse ourselves too often. The voters are not misled by it. We cannot have our cake and eat it too . . . Mr. Tydings cannot escape the fact that he runs as a Democrat and votes as a Republican."

Pugh Criticizes Md. Dog Muzzle Orders of Police

Crediting his dog with having saved him the cost of a new automobile battery, State's Attorney James Pugh, of Montgomery County, yesterday criticized the recent ordinance of the board of commissioners requiring all dogs to be either muzzled or leashed.

Pugh said one of his two bird dogs, confined in the yard of his home, 6902 Glendale road, Chevy Chase, had frightened off a thief who attempted to steal the battery out of his automobile Thursday night.

"Instead of an ordinance requiring all dogs to be tied up or muzzled, the police should be authorized to bring to trial any dog accused of having bitten someone and if necessary have the animal shot," he declared.

U. S. Bureau Chieftain Perfects Home-Made Electric Mower

Called Guilda, Because It Shimmies, He Constructed It from Odds and Ends Around His Bethesda Home.

A rolling lawn mower, named Gilda, because it shimmies, complete with four baby-carriage wheels, an electric motor, a single strap-iron attachment and a home-made chassis, is the latest contribution to homemakers by Allyn Walters, chief of the Information Section, Rural Electrification Administration.

Walters, who lives at 4827 Chestnut street, Bethesda, Md., spends his spare time trying to figure out methods to use electric power for home-used gadgets.

"The only trouble is," Walters laments, "my neighbors, just like Tom Sawyer's friends, want to do my work, not painting fences, but mowing my lawn with Gilda."

However, not only is the lawn mower very efficient, especially with tall weeds, but somebody will always want to do the work for you, Walters said.

The strap-iron which is attached to the lower end of the motor spins around at the rate of 1,800 revolutions per minute, and it is this whirling action that levels the tallest and most stubborn weeds, he said. The strap-iron is maleable and can be bent lower for cutting smooth lawns, and higher for cutting down weeds.

If you want to make a Walters lawnmower first get a set of wheels, from a boy's wagon or a baby carriage; a quarter-horsepower electric motor; a piece of strap-iron about 16 inches long; a half-inch iron or steel rod about 6 inches long, threaded on one end; and a collar to connect the motor shaft rigidly to the metal rod.

With these and some odds and ends of lumber, a rather strange looking, but very efficient lawnmower can be constructed in a few hours, Walters said.

Recently Walters tried out his invention on a vacant lot next to his house. It was cluttered with tall weeds. But not now. It would be nice to have Mr. Walters live next door, wouldn't it?

But walters loves to tinker with his lawnmower. He tried his motor on an ordinary lawnmower before he hit upon this invention. But it wouldn't work. Besides, he had an old carriage around the house.

The motor is supplied electricity from the house current. A long, heavy weather-proof cable carries the cable to the machine. An on-off switch is located conveniently to the end of the handle. Another feature is the motor is detachable for the other work.

There is no cutting edge on the strap-iron, although a squared edge gives slightly better results, Walters said.

"The beauty of Gilda is," he said, "she works better when the going's toughest."

Walters said he is now going to electrically air-condition his attic and then he's going to tackle electrifying his ordinary-type lawnmower.

Police Await 'Notifying Bandit' Who Warns Chosen Victims

Montgomery County police were on the lookout last night for a sporting burglar who notifies his victims before staging a robbery.

A year ago Wednesday, Troy L. Waldrop, owner of the Dixie Pig barbecue in Silver Spring, received a telephone call from an anonymous fellow who announced he planned to rob the restaurant that night. When Waldrop opened up the next morning, money and considerable stock were gone.

The following day a similar experience befell Paul Durrer, of the Grotto Grill, two blocks away.

That was a year ago. Night before last Waldrop received a telephone call announcing the same intention and that night three slot machines were stolen. Thursday morning Durrer was called. He kept an all-night vigil with two friends, R. B. Gill and Otto Cashell. Nothing happened.

Yesterday, however, Durrer received a second phone call. "We just wanted to tell you we have postponed our visit a day and we'll be around to pick up your machines tonight," his mysterious informant said.

Police were on guard at Durrer's place last night.

It is reported police sought copies of all messages that passed to and from the S. S. Duchess of Bedford before young Bull left the vessel.

The Thrill That Comes Once in a Lifetime

"The Timid Soul" by Webster Appears in Sunday's Post.

Bob Burns

Says—

I believe we're all human and have the same traits and do the same things for the same reasons, but some people use fancier terms for it to make themselves sound high falutin'.

Not long ago in a fancy, exclusive ladies' club they were discussing the reasons why women cry. One after the other they got up and said the reason they cried was to get something out of their systems. Finally a lady rose in the back and said: "Girls, I think it's about time one of us was tellin' the truth about this thing. I don't cry to get things out of my system. I cry to get things out of my husband."

Southwest Site For School to Cost $192,000

After 13 Years' Haggling, District Agrees on Price of Wimsatt Tract.

The District Commissioners yesterday agreed to pay $192,000 for a portion of the Southwest Jefferson Junior High School site that a few years ago they turned down at $150,000 and which is now assessed at $60,860. They had haggled with Johnson & Wimsatt, Inc., over the price for 13 years.

The purchase will enable the District heads to proceed with plans for construction of an $800,000 Thomas Jefferson Junior High School and library in the southwest. It also will permit the development of playgrounds and recreational areas for which the National Capital Park and Planning Commission has $180,000.

Preliminary sketches for the school have been submitted to the Board of Education, and the District has $300,000 to start construction.

Site Chosen in 1925.

The purchase was recommended by a committee of District officials following a first-hand investigation. At the same time the committee proposed that the old Cardozo School, Delaware avenue and I street southwest, be razed for the southwest health center, for which there is $200,000.

The Jefferson School tract is bounded by Seventh and Ninth and H and I streets. The District bought the first portion for $126,000 in 1930.

The site was selected and the school authorized in February, 1925. In January, 1930, a condemnation jury placed a price of $105,000 on the Wimsatt tract. W. K. Wimsatt, president, offered to sell for $150,000 and when the commissioners declined he appealed from the jury award.

In 1931 the Court of Appeals ordered a new trial on the ground that the tax assessor was not a competent witness and hinted the $105,000 award was too low.

Price Was Raised.

In November, the same year, a second condemnation jury placed a price of $294,874 on the property, and the commissioners dropped the suit.

Thereafter Wimsatt held out for $185,000—and in 1933 the commissioners obtained an additional $75,000 appropriation to add to $105,000 they had, but the latter appropriation lapsed one day after the signing of the new act and before a purchase could be arranged.

In 1932 Congress appropriated $200,000 for construction of the school, and in 1935 the commissioners recommended an appropriation of $150,000 for the site, but the Budget Bureau held it up.

Last year the District supply act authorized the use of $190,000—all that remained of the $200,000 appropriated for the school in 1932—for the purchase of the site but specified that the Wimsatt tract should not be bought. The same act carried $300,000 for the construction of the school.

This year the limitation on the site purchase was withdrawn and the $192,000 was made available for the closing of the deal.

G.W. Falls Heir To Washington Memorial Fund

$200,000 to University as 40-Year-Old Group Is Dissolved.

Incorporated more than 40 years ago, the George Washington Memorial Association went out of existence yesterday when Justice Oscar Luhring, in District Court, signed an order permitting dissolution of the corporation and turning over to George Washington University approximately $200,000.

The trustees of the association agreed that giving the remaining funds to the university would come nearest to fulfilling the original aims of the group. At one time Congress set aside a tract of land on Pennsylvania avenue between Sixth and Seventh streets northwest, and a foundation for a magnificient edifice was begun.

However, Congress took back the land when building was not continued, and the site was turned over to the Smithsonian Institution.

Corcoran Thom, president of the American Security & Trust Co. and trustee for the fund, was authorized to turn the money over to the university, the Board of Trustees of which already has voted to accept it.

Justice Luhring also authorized Thom to pay all costs of settling the association's affairs out of its funds. These include $17,500 counsel fees for Archie Shipe, attorney for the asssociation; $5,000 to McKenney, Flannery and Craighill, attorneys for Thom, and $8,000 to Clephane, Latimer and Hill, attorneys for the university.

The move to give G. W. U. the money was made because of "the character and high standing of its scholastic work, because of its location in the National Capital and because said university bears the name of George Washington." The association originally planned to erect here an institution "to aid in securing in the City of Washington the increase of opportunities for higher education as recommended by George Washington."

Contributions from all over the country were received and at one time the association had a fund of about $900,000. Of that amount more than $600,000 has been spent.

Ruperters to Command Marine Barracks in Capital.

Col. Joseph C. Fegan, commander of the Marine Barracks here, has received orders to assume command of the Fourth Marines at Shanghai, China, early next fall, succeeding Col. Charles F. B. Price, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

At the Marine Barracks, Col. Fegan will be followed by Col. William H. Rupertus, a native of Washington, who has just completed a tour of duty as executive officer of the Fourth Marines.

Col. Price is expected to come to the National Capital for duty with the Marine Corps Examining Board.

After entering the Marine Corps in 1909, Col. Fegan served in Panama and then was at sea on board the battleship Florida. He has served at many posts and stations on the East and West Coast.

Was Aide to Roosevelt.

In 1933 he became public relations officer at Marine Corps Headquarters here. Col. Fegan was aide to President Roosevelt during his official visit to the Governor General of Canada.

After graduating from the Revenue Cutter School, predecessor of the Coast Guard Academy, Col. Rupertus entered the Marine Corps in 1913. During the World War commanded the Marine detachment aboard the battleship Florida.

From July, 1919, until April, 1923, he served with the First Marine Brigade in Haiti. In 1931 Col. Rupertus was ordered to duty in the war plans section at Marine Corps Headquarters and then was sent to Sunnyvale, Calif., to establish the Marine Barracks there. Six years later he was sent to the Fourth Marines.

Has Had Varied Career.

Col. Price, who has been commander of the Fourth Marines since before the outbreak of the Sino-Japanese War, has had a long and varied service career.

He was in Mexico in 1916 and commanded the marine detachment aboard the battleship Arkansas, from December, 1916, until January, 1918. He then served in France until November, 1919.

Willard Thorp Picked to Help Trust Inquiry

tion of his appointment, attributed by many to political considerations, developed in the Senate Commerce Committee, headed by Senator Hubert Stephens, of Mississippi.

After long and heated controversy, Stephens advised the President that 11 members of the committee were opposed to Thorp's confirmation and prevailed on the President to withdraw the nomination. Thorp resigned while Mr. Roosevelt praised him for "real and substantial contribution to the great cause to which we have all committed ourselves."

Row Was Bitter.

Withdrawal of the nomination promptly was criticized bluntly by John Dickinson, then Assistant Secretary of Commerce, and it was reported Dickinson also would resign. He declared the Senate's failure to confirm the nomination raised the question of whether the office should be turned over to "low grade, political mongering for patronage, or be conducted on an efficient business basis, as it should be."

Dickinson and others charged that the Senate action was due to the fact that he had registered as a Republican while he was professor of economics at Amherst College.

Thorp retired in May, 1934, but in August of that year was appointed director of the consumers division of the National Emergency Council, an appointment then considered vastly more significant than his first, in view of the official concern at that time over rising food prices.

Adviser to NRA.

In the NRA reorganization of October, 1934, Dr. Thorp was named associate economic adviser to the NRA administrative board. He quit the NRA in 1935 to join the Dun & Bradstreet staff.

He has degrees from Amherst, University of Michigan and Columbia University, and is the author of many articles on international business and economics, including two books, "Business Annals," a history of business conditions in 17 countries, and "Economic Institutions."

He has served also as director of research for the New York State Board of Housing, and with the Massachusetts Commission on Stabilization of Employment. In 1934 he was selected by the League of Nations as the American member of the economic committee which met at Geneva.

Dewey to Name Hines 'Friends' Among Judges

N. Y. Politicians in Jitters Awaiting List Believed Due Monday.

By the United Press.

New York, July 22.—Thomas E. Dewey, New York district attorney, tonight threw a new load of jitters into political circles when it was learned he would name Monday a list of judges allegedly "influenced" by Tammany Leader James J. Hines.

Hines, who has been regarded for years as the inside ruler of Tammany Hall, is under indictment with eight others in Dewey's investigation of the $100,000,000 "Dutch Schultz" lottery racket.

Dewey has charged Hines was "the man higher up" who did the political "fixing" for the racketeers, and this week Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora instructed Dewey to supply Hines with the names of any judges he is supposed to have "fixed."

One of Dewey's assistants, Charles F. Grimes, today obtained an order to show cause, which it was hoped might circumvent the order, but it was learned Dewey's office has prepared to name the judges and other officials whom Hines supposedly tried to corrupt.

It was believed Dewey's list would not be long, but would include some important political names. The Hines case is regarded as the biggest piece of political meat Dewey has attempted to chew on since he began his racket-breaking career, and has been watched closely in political quarters in New York and also in Washington.

In 1892 he became associated with his father in the manufacture of clay products, making sewer pipes, a business the elder Lamond had learned in Scotland. He later came to Washington and engaged in the same business, and in 1907 he started the Potomac River Clay Works, on the old Slater place then in Arlington County, but now in Alexandria, on the Mount Vernon boulevard. In the past few years details of the business have been handled by his sons.

In 1907, he married Miss Mary E. Slater, who died in 1928, and in 1931 he married Mrs. Hilda Ross Meyer, of Easton, Md.

Mr. Lamond was for many years a director of the Citizens' National Bank, and on April 15, 1937, was chosen president to succeed the late Carroll Pierce. He resigned as president of the Clarendon Trust Co. of Arlington County, to accept the position in the local bank, but continued as a director. State Troopers Refused Galax For Strike Use

Duty of Local Police to Enforce Law, Says Gov. Price.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 22.—Gov. Price said today that Galax authorities have the primary obligation of law enforcement at the strike-closed Vaughan furniture plant at Galax and that the State highway police force "is not a strike-breaking force."

The Governor emphasized that the State police force is "for the protection of the men and the company alike" in commenting on a request by Galax authorities to send 20 officers to the strike scene. He said he had not promised to send 20 men as requested because "no concrete evidence has been received here that the situation is beyond their (the local officials') means of control."

He added he was "standing by" to determine what action might be required by future developments.

Picketing Is Orderly.

Galax, Va., July 22 (AP).—Strikers of the Vaughan Furniture Co. here continued picketing the plant today, according to S. F. Fulks, attorney for the strikers, and Rupert Farmer, their spokesman. The activities of the strikers were orderly.

Taylor C. Vaughan, president of the company, said the plant would be reopened Monday morning, and inserted newspaper advertisements offering jobs to workers.

Strikers refused to permit the driver of a transfer truck to pass through the plant gates yesterday afternoon. Officers learned of the incident and planned to escort the truck through the gates, but the transfer company decided against a second attempt.

TVA Attorney Favors Control By 3-Man Board

Fly Says It's Unlikely That All Would Be 'On Eccentric Side.'

The General Accounting Office cannot render the most efficient audit to the Tennessee Valley Authority because it lacks trained personnel, James Lawrence Fly, general counsel of the TVA, asserted last night.

He spoke before lawyers and law students at the final session of the Symposium on Government at the George Washington University law school. Fly asserted he favored an annual audit by an independent organization.

"Any undercover effort on the part of a single director to hamper the policies as previously adopted by the board is quite intolerable," said Fly.

Fly refrained from saying whether he meant Arthur Morgan, deposed chairman of the TVA board.

He asserted the three-man board was the best way to administer the affairs of the TVA.

"Some have suggested a three-man board is inadvisable, but I do not agree," said he.

"The chances of getting a good administration are better with the three-man board than under a single administrator.

"It is unlikely there would be three men on the board who would go off on the eccentric side.

"I have the greatest faith in the capacity of three well-balanced intelligent men, in possession of all the facts, to arrive at sound final judgment," Fly continued.

The one-time pupil of Prof. Felix Frankfurter assumed his duties a year and a half ago.

MODERN IRELAND SETS AN EXAMPLE FOR THIS WAR-TORN WORLD

. . . says Charles Edward Russell

With bombing planes raining death and destruction over wide areas; with long-range guns blasting cities out of existence, Ireland shows the world the way to peace and contentment. The 700-year feud between Ireland and England has been ended. In a full page article in this Sunday's Post, Charles Edward Russell tells of the good will and neighborliness which have replaced seven centuries of strife.

An authority on Ireland and its problems, Mr. Russell was covering that country at the time of the Easter Rebellion in 1916; he greeted Eamon de Valera when the Irish leader escaped from prison; he was the only journalist to see de Valera in hiding in 1923.
